CRIMINAL PROCEEDS CONFISCATION ACT 2002

[reprinted as in force on 1 January 2003]

An Act to provide for the confiscation of the proceeds of crime, and for other purposes

CHAPTER 1—INTRODUCTION

1 Short title

This Act may be cited as the Criminal Proceeds Confiscation Act 2002.

2 Commencement

(1) This Act, other than the following provisions, commences on 1 January 2003—

- (a) chapter 12, part 4;
- (b) section 283 and schedule 3, items 49 and 50;
- (c) section 339 and schedule 4, to the extent the schedule amends the Trustee Companies Act 1968.

(2) Schedule 3, items 49 and 50 are taken to have commenced on 1 January 2002.

(3) The following provisions commence on assent—

- (a) chapter 12, part 4;
- (b) section 283;
- (c) section 339 and schedule 4, to the extent the schedule amends the Trustee Companies Act 1968.

3 Definitions

The dictionary in schedule 6 defines particular terms used in this Act.

4 Objects

(1) The main object of this Act is to remove the financial gain and increase the financial loss associated with illegal activity, whether or not a particular person is convicted of an offence because of the activity.

(2) It is also an important object of this Act—

- (a) to ensure that property rights are affected by orders under this Act, including orders limiting a person's ability to deal with the property, only through procedures ensuring persons who may be affected by the orders are given a reasonable opportunity to establish the lawfulness of the activity through which they acquired the relevant property rights; and
- (b) to protect property honestly acquired by persons innocent of illegal activity from forfeiture and other orders affecting property; and
- (c) to ensure that orders of other States restraining or forfeiting property under corresponding laws may be enforced in Queensland.

(3) This Act provides for 2 separate schemes to achieve its objects.

(4) One of the schemes relies on a person being charged and convicted (as defined in this Act) and is administered by the DPP.

(5) The other scheme does not depend on a charge or conviction and is administered by the Crime and Misconduct Commission.

(6) Despite the similarities between the schemes, each is separate and neither scheme is to be construed as limiting the other, unless this Act otherwise expressly provides.

5 Act binds State

(1) This Act binds all persons, including the State and, as far as the legislative power of Parliament permits, the Commonwealth and the other States.

(2) Nothing in this Act makes the State, the Commonwealth or the other States liable to be prosecuted for an offence.

6 Notes

A note in the text of this Act is part of this Act.

7 Examples in sch 1

(1) An example in schedule 1, part 1 is an example of the practical operation of the application of the definition “illegally acquired property”.

Note—

For the definition, see section 22.

The examples apply in the same way to the practical operation of the definition “serious crime derived property”.

(2) An example in schedule 1, part 2 is an example of the practical operation of chapter 2, part 5.¹

(3) An example in schedule 1, part 3 is an example of the practical operation of the application of the definition “tainted property”.

Note—

For the definition, see section 104.

(4) An example in schedule 1, part 4 is an example of the practical operation of chapter 3, part 7, division 3.²

8 Proceeding other than for offence is not criminal proceeding

(1) This section applies to a proceeding under this Act other than a prosecution for an offence against this Act.

(2) The proceeding is not a criminal proceeding.

(3) Questions of fact in the proceeding must be decided on the balance of probabilities.

(4) The rules of evidence applying in civil proceedings apply to the proceeding.

(5) The rules of construction applying only to the criminal law do not apply in the interpretation of this Act for the proceeding.

1 Chapter 2 (Confiscation without conviction), part 5 (Proceeds assessment orders)

2 Chapter 3 (Confiscation after conviction), part 7 (Pecuniary penalty orders), division 3 (Assessment of benefits)

9 Orders under this Act not a sentence

An order under this Act requiring the payment of an amount or imposing a penalty, other than for a conviction for an offence against this Act, or restraining or forfeiting property, is not a punishment or sentence for any offence.

10 Operation of other laws not affected

Nothing in this Act limits or restricts the operation of any other law providing for the forfeiture of property.

11 Interstate operation of particular orders

(1) For the purpose of enabling a forfeiture order or a restraining order to be registered under the corresponding law of another State, the order may be expressed to apply to property in that State.

(2) A forfeiture order or restraining order does not apply to property in another State, unless—

- (a) a corresponding law of the other State provides that the order has effect in the State after registration under that law; or
- (b) the property was movable property and was located in Queensland or another State with a corresponding law when the order took effect.

12 Proceedings by the State and meaning of “appropriate officer”

(1) If the State may start a proceeding under this Act, the proceeding may be started for the State as follows—

- (a) for chapter 2—
 - (i) by the commission; or
 - (ii) with the approval of the commission, by a police officer; or
- (b) for chapter 3 or 4, by an appropriate officer; or
- (c) for chapter 10, part 1, by an appropriate officer.

(2) A proceeding taken by or for the State must be taken under the title “State of Queensland”.

(3) The DPP is the solicitor on the record for the proceeding.

(4) Without limiting subsection (2), any document of the State necessary for the proceeding under a provision of this Act may be signed by a person who is an appropriate officer for that provision.

(5) For this Act, “appropriate officer”—

- (a) for subsection (1)(c), chapter 2 or chapter 10,³ means—
 - (i) the chairperson; or
 - (ii) an authorised commission officer; or
 - (iii) the DPP, a deputy DPP, or a lawyer appointed to assist the DPP in the performance of the DPP’s functions; or
- (b) for subsection (1)(b), chapter 3 or chapter 4⁴—

 - (ii) for the purposes of an application to a Magistrates Court for a forfeiture order or pecuniary penalty order and related matters—includes the commissioner of the police service or another police officer.

CHAPTER 2—CONFISCATION WITHOUT CONVICTION

PART 1—PRELIMINARY

13 Explanation of ch 2

(1) This chapter enables proceedings to be started to confiscate property derived from illegal activity whether or not a person who engaged in the relevant activity has been convicted of any offence.

(2) Also, this chapter enables proceedings to be taken to confiscate property derived from a serious crime related activity even though the person who engaged in the relevant activity has not been identified.

3 Chapter 2 (Conviction without conviction) or 10 (Miscellaneous provisions)

4 Chapter 3 (Confiscation after conviction) or 4 (Special forfeiture orders)

(3) The chapter enables the Supreme Court, as a preliminary step, to make a restraining order preventing property, whether the property of the person who engaged in the relevant illegal activity or the serious crime derived property of someone else, being dealt with without the court's leave.

(4) The court must make a forfeiture order confiscating the property (unless it is not in the public interest to make the order) if it finds it is more probable than not that—

- (a) the person whose suspected serious crime related activity was the basis of the relevant restraining order engaged in a serious crime related activity; or
- (b) the property is serious crime derived property because of a serious crime related activity of a person, even though a particular person suspected of having engaged in the serious crime related activity can not be identified.

(5) The court may also make a proceeds assessment order against a person who has engaged in a serious crime related activity, requiring the person to pay to the State the amount the court decides is the value of proceeds derived from the person's illegal activity over a period of up to 6 years before the application for the order is made.

(6) The amount payable under the proceeds assessment order may be recovered as a debt payable to the State.

(7) The chapter contains other ancillary provisions including provisions giving persons opportunities to have lawfully acquired property excluded from the effect of restraining orders and forfeiture orders.

14 Application of ch 2

Subject to the limitation period imposed under section 58, this chapter applies in relation to illegal activity or serious crime related activity whether happening before or after the commencement of this section.

PART 2—INTERPRETATION

Division 1—References to relevant offences

15 Meaning of “illegal activity”

An “illegal activity” is an activity that is—

- (a) a serious crime related activity; or
- (b) an act or omission that is an offence against the law of Queensland or the Commonwealth; or
- (c) an act or omission committed outside Queensland that—
 - (i) is an offence against the law of the place in which it is committed; and
 - (ii) would be an offence mentioned in paragraph (b) if it were committed in Queensland.

Note—

This definition applies to the whole Act. See the dictionary.

16 Meaning of “serious crime related activity”

(1) Anything done by a person that was, when it was done, a serious criminal offence, is a “serious crime related activity”.

(2) Subsection (1) applies whether or not the person has been charged with the offence or, if charged—

- (a) has been tried; or
- (b) has been tried and acquitted; or
- (c) has been convicted, even if the conviction has been quashed or set aside.

17 Meaning of “serious criminal offence”

(1) An offence is a “serious criminal offence” if it is any of the following—

- (a) an indictable offence for which the maximum penalty is at least 5 years imprisonment;

- (b) an offence prescribed under a regulation for this definition;
- (c) an ancillary offence to an offence mentioned in paragraph (a) or (b).

(2) In this section—

“indictable offence” includes an indictable offence dealt with summarily.

Division 2—References to proceeds, property and benefits

18 Meaning of “proceeds”

“Proceeds”, in relation to an activity, includes property and another benefit derived because of the activity—

- (a) by the person who engaged in the activity; or
- (b) by another person at the direction or request, directly or indirectly, of the person who engaged in the activity.

19 Meaning of “property”

“Property” of a person—

- (a) includes—
 - (i) an interest the person has in a licence a person must hold to carry on a particular business; and
 - (ii) an interest the person has in the goodwill of a business; and
- (b) does not include property of the person that is under the effective control of someone else.

Note—

This provision is in addition to the definition of property given by the Acts Interpretation Act 1954, section 36.

20 Meaning of “effective control” of property

(1) Property may be under a person’s “effective control” even if—

- (a) the person does not have a direct or indirect right, power or privilege over, or in relation to, the property; or
- (b) the person does not otherwise have an interest in the property.

(2) Regard may be had to all relevant matters in deciding—

- (a) whether or not property is under a person’s effective control; or
- (b) whether or not there are reasonable grounds to suspect that property is under a person’s effective control.

(3) Matters to which regard may be had include, for example—

- (a) shareholdings in, debentures over, or directorships of, a corporation that has a direct or indirect interest in the property; and
- (b) a trust that has a relationship to the property; and
- (c) family, domestic, business and other relationships between any of the following and other persons—
 - (i) persons having an interest in the property;
 - (ii) corporations that have a direct or indirect interest in the property;
 - (iii) trusts that have a relationship to the property.

(4) However, property is under the effective control of a person (the “first person”) if the property—

- (a) is held by another person for the ultimate benefit of the first person; or
- (b) was a gift given by the first person to another person within 6 years before the making of an application for a restraining order, whether or not the gift is still in the other person’s possession.

Note—

This definition applies to the whole Act. See the dictionary.

21 Meaning of “benefit” and “benefit derived”

(1) “Benefit” includes service and advantage.

(2) A “benefit derived” by a person includes a benefit derived by someone else at the person’s request or direction.

Division 3—References to illegally acquired property and serious crime derived property

Subdivision 1—Meaning of particular property related terms

22 Meaning of “illegally acquired property”

(1) Property is “illegally acquired property” if it is all or part of the proceeds of an illegal activity.

(2) Property is also “illegally acquired property” if—

(a) it is all or part of the proceeds of dealing with illegally acquired property; or

(b) all or part of it was acquired using illegally acquired property.

(3) For subsection (2), it does not matter whether the property dealt with or used in the acquisition became illegally acquired property because of subsection (1) or subsection (2).

(4) Subsections (1) and (2) apply whether or not the activity, dealing or acquisition because of which the property became illegally acquired property happened before the commencement of this section.

(5) Also, if the proceeds of dealing with illegally acquired property are credited to or placed in an account, the proceeds do not lose their identity as proceeds because they are credited to or placed in an account.

Note—

Generally, illegally acquired property is used in this chapter, but some provisions, for example, section 28(3)(c), use the narrower expression “serious crime derived property”.⁵

This definition applies to the whole Act. See the dictionary.

23 Meaning of “serious crime derived property”

(1) Property is “serious crime derived property” if it is all or part of the proceeds of a serious crime related activity.

(2) Property is also “serious crime derived property” if—

5 Section 28 (Application for restraining order)

- (a) it is all or part of the proceeds of dealing with serious crime derived property; or
- (b) all or part of it was acquired using serious crime derived property.

(3) For subsection (2), it does not matter whether the property dealt with or used in the acquisition became serious crime derived property because of subsection (1) or subsection (2).

(4) Subsections (1) and (2) apply whether or not the activity, dealing or acquisition because of which the property became serious crime derived property happened before the commencement of this section.

(5) Also, if the proceeds of dealing with serious crime derived property are credited to or placed in an account, the proceeds do not lose their identity as proceeds because they are credited to or placed in an account.

Subdivision 2—Provisions about continuing application of subdivision 1 to illegally acquired property and serious crime derived property

24 Definitions for subdiv 2

In this subdivision—

“character” of property means its character as either illegally acquired property or serious crime derived property.

“property” means property that is either of the following because of subdivision 1—

- (a) illegally acquired property;
- (b) serious crime derived property.

25 Property retains its character despite disposal

Illegally acquired property or serious crime derived property retains its character—even if it is disposed of, including by using it to acquire other property—until it stops being property of that character under section 26.

26 When property stops being illegally acquired property or serious crime derived property

Property stops being illegally acquired property or serious crime derived property—

- (a) when it is acquired by a person for sufficient consideration, without knowing, and in circumstances not likely to arouse a reasonable suspicion, that the property was illegally acquired property or serious crime derived property; or
- (b) when it vests in a person on the distribution of the estate of a deceased; or
- (c) when it is disposed of under this Act, including when discharging a pecuniary penalty order or a proceeds assessment order; or
- (d) when it is the proceeds of the disposal of property under this Act other than by sale under a condition of a restraining order or by order of the Supreme Court under section 46 or 138;⁶ or
- (e) when it is acquired by Legal Aid as payment of reasonable legal expenses payable because of an application under this Act or in defending a charge of an offence; or
- (f) in circumstances prescribed under a regulation.

27 Property may again become illegally acquired property or serious crime derived property

If property that was, but is no longer, illegally acquired property or serious crime derived property is again acquired by the person who owned it when it had that character, the property again becomes property of that character unless it is acquired by the person under an order under this Act.

Note—

For an example of the practical operation of this provision, see schedule 1, part 1, example 2.

⁶ Section 46 (Supreme Court may order sale of restrained property) or 138 (Supreme Court may order sale of restrained property)

PART 3—RESTRAINING ORDERS

Division 1—Application for restraining orders

28 Application for restraining order

(1) The State may apply to the Supreme Court for an order (“restraining order”) restraining any person from dealing with property stated in the order (the “restrained property”) other than in a stated way or in stated circumstances.

(2) The application—

- (a) must be supported by an affidavit of an authorised commission officer or a police officer; and
- (b) may be made without notice to any person to whom it relates.

(3) The application may relate to all or any of the following property—

- (a) for property of a person suspected of having engaged in 1 or more serious crime related activities (a “prescribed respondent”)—
 - (i) stated property; or
 - (ii) a stated class of property; or
 - (iii) all property; or
 - (iv) all property other than stated property; or
 - (v) all or stated property acquired after the restraining order is made;
- (b) stated property, or a stated class of property, of a stated person, other than a prescribed respondent;
- (c) stated property suspected of being serious crime derived property because of a serious crime related activity of a person, even though a particular person suspected of having engaged in the serious crime related activity can not be identified.

(4) The court may refuse to consider the application until the State gives the court all the information the court requires about the application in the way the court requires.

Example—

The court may require additional information supporting the application to be given by affidavit or statutory declaration.

29 Affidavit

The affidavit of the authorised commission officer or police officer must state—

- (a) for property mentioned in section 28(3)(a) if the serious crime related activity involves an offence stated in schedule 2, part 1—the officer suspects the prescribed respondent—
 - (i) has engaged in 1 or more serious crime related activities; and
 - (ii) the reason for the suspicion; or
- (b) for property mentioned in section 28(3)(a) if paragraph (a) does not apply—the officer suspects the prescribed respondent—
 - (i) has engaged in 1 or more serious crime related activities; and
 - (ii) has derived proceeds from engaging in 1 or more of these serious crime related activities; and
 - (iii) the reason for the suspicion; or
- (c) for property mentioned in section 28(3)(b)—the officer suspects the property is serious crime derived property because of a serious crime related activity of a prescribed respondent and the reason for the suspicion; or
- (d) for property mentioned in section 28(3)(c)—the officer suspects the property is serious crime derived property and the reason for the suspicion.

Division 2—Making restraining orders

30 Who may be present at hearing of application made without notice

(1) This section applies if the State applies for a restraining order without notice to any person to whom it relates.

(2) The Supreme Court must hear the application in the absence of anyone other than—

- (a) an appropriate officer; or
- (b) a commission officer; or
- (c) a police officer; or
- (d) an officer of a law enforcement agency of another State or the Commonwealth; or
- (e) a lawyer representing anyone mentioned in paragraphs (a) to (d).

(3) Also, the court must hear the application—

- (a) in the absence of a person whose property is the subject of the application; and
- (b) without the relevant person having been informed of the application.

31 Making restraining order

(1) The Supreme Court must make a restraining order in relation to property if, after considering the application and the relevant affidavit, it is satisfied there are reasonable grounds for the suspicion on which the application is based.

(2) However, the court may refuse to make the order if—

- (a) the court is satisfied in the particular circumstances it is not in the public interest to make the order; or
- (b) the State fails to give the court the undertakings the court considers appropriate for the payment of damages or costs, or both, in relation to the making and operation of the order.

(3) The commission or, if the application is made by a police officer, the commissioner of the police service may, for the State, give the court the undertakings the court requires.

(4) A restraining order does not apply to property of a person acquired after the order is made unless the order expressly states it applies to the property.

(5) Also, the making of a restraining order does not prevent the person whose property is restrained under the order from giving Legal Aid a charge over the property as a condition of an approval to give legal assistance under the Legal Aid Act in relation to—

- (a) a proceeding under this Act; or
- (b) a criminal proceeding in which the person is a defendant, including any proceeding on appeal against conviction or sentence.

32 Conditions of restraining order

(1) It is a condition of every restraining order that the person whose property is restrained under the order must preserve the property.

(2) The Supreme Court may impose the other conditions the court considers appropriate, including, but not limited to, the following—

- (a) a condition about who is to have possession of the property;
- (b) a condition of a kind mentioned in section 33 or 34.

33 Condition about dealing with property by agreement

The Supreme Court may impose a condition authorising the commission or, if the application is made by a police officer, the commissioner of the police service to agree to—

- (a) the disposal of the property restrained under the restraining order by its owner to enable the proceeds of the disposal to be applied to satisfy all or part of a debt payable under a pecuniary penalty order or a proceeds assessment order; or
- (b) the application of the property by its owner to satisfy all or part of a debt payable under a pecuniary penalty order or a proceeds assessment order.

34 Condition about particular payments out of restrained property

(1) The Supreme Court may impose a condition providing for all or any of the following to be paid out of the property of a particular person, or a stated part of the person's property, restrained under the restraining order—

- (a) the person's reasonable living expenses and reasonable business expenses;
- (b) the reasonable living expenses of any of the person's dependants;

(c) a stated debt incurred in good faith by the person.

(2) Subsection (1) is the only provision of this chapter under which provision may be made for the payment of expenses or a debt mentioned in subsection (1).

(3) Also, subsection (1) applies only if the Supreme Court is satisfied—

- (a) the person can not meet the expenses or debt out of property that is not restrained under the order; and
- (b) the property from which the expenses or debt are to be paid is not illegally acquired property.

(4) Further, subsection (1) does not authorise the imposition of a condition providing for the payment of a person's legal expenses that are payable because—

- (a) the person is a party to a proceeding under this Act; or
- (b) the person is a defendant in a criminal proceeding, including any proceeding on appeal against conviction or sentence.

35 Restraining order may direct public trustee to take control of property

If the Supreme Court considers the circumstances require it, the court may, in a restraining order or a later order, direct the public trustee to take control of some or all of the property restrained under the order.

36 Duration of restraining order

(1) A restraining order is in force for 28 days after it is made.

(2) Despite subsection (1), a restraining order continues in force after the end of the 28 days if—

- (a) before the end of the 28 days, an application for either or both of the following is made but the application has not been decided—
 - (i) a forfeiture order for the restrained property;
 - (ii) a proceeds assessment order against a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order; or
- (b) there is an unsatisfied proceeds assessment order in force against the person whose suspected serious crime related activities were the basis of the restraining order; or

- (c) the order continues in force because of an order of the Supreme Court under section 54.⁷

Division 3—Making other orders

37 Supreme Court may make other orders

(1) The Supreme Court may make the other orders in relation to a restraining order the court considers appropriate, including, but not limited to, orders mentioned in section 38.

(2) However, section 38(h) is the only provision of this chapter under which provision may be made for the payment of legal expenses that are expenses payable because—

- (a) the person is a party to a proceeding under this Act; or
- (b) the person is a defendant in a criminal proceeding, including any proceeding on appeal against a conviction or sentence.

(3) The court may make an order under this section—

- (a) when making the restraining order or, on application, at a later time; and
- (b) whether or not it affects a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order.

(4) Any of the following may apply for an order under this section—

- (a) the State;
- (b) a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order;
- (c) if the restraining order directs the public trustee to take control of restrained property under the restraining order—the public trustee.

(5) Also, with the Supreme Court's leave, a person other than a person mentioned in subsection (4) may apply for an order under this section.

(6) An applicant must give notice of the making of the application to each other person who may apply under subsection (4) for an order under this section.

⁷ Section 54 (Effect of dismissal of particular applications on restraining order)

(7) Subsection (6) does not apply to an application for an order under this section made in a proceeding on an application for a restraining order that is made without notice to any person to whom it relates.

38 Particular orders Supreme Court may make

(1) For section 37, the orders are as follows—

- (a) an order varying the property restrained under the restraining order;
- (b) an order imposing additional conditions on the restraining order or varying a condition of the order;
- (c) an order (“examination order”) requiring a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order or a stated person to attend for examination on oath before the court or a judicial registrar about the following—
 - (i) the affairs of any person whose property is restrained under the restraining order;
 - (ii) the nature and location of any property of a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order;
 - (iii) the nature and location of any property restrained under the restraining order that the applicant for the order reasonably suspects is serious crime derived property;
- (d) an order (also an “examination order”) requiring the spouse of a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order to attend for examination on oath before the court or a judicial registrar about the spouse’s affairs, including the nature and location of property in which the spouse or the person has an interest;
- (e) an order about the performance of an undertaking given in relation to the restraining order for the payment of damages or costs;
- (f) an order (“property particulars order”) directing either of the following to give to the commission or the public trustee, within a stated time, a sworn statement of particulars of the property, or dealings with the property, in which the owner has or had an interest, as the court considers appropriate—
 - (i) a person who is or was the owner of restrained property;

- (ii) if the owner of restrained property is or was a corporation—an executive officer of the corporation;
- (g) if the restraining order directs the public trustee to take control of property, an order—
 - (i) regulating the way the public trustee may perform functions under the restraining order; or
 - (ii) deciding any question about the property, including a question affecting the liabilities of the owner of the property or the functions of the public trustee;
- (h) an order for the payment to Legal Aid, from property restrained under the restraining order, of expenses payable by the person whose property is restrained because—
 - (i) the person is a party to a proceeding under this Act; or
 - (ii) the person is a defendant in a criminal proceeding, including any proceeding on appeal against conviction or sentence;
- (i) an order (“property seizure order”) requiring or authorising a commission officer or a police officer to seize property restrained under the restraining order.

(2) An order mentioned in subsection (1)(i) may state the powers the commission officer or police officer may exercise for giving effect to the order.

Note—

See sections 43 and 44 for the general effect of a property seizure order.

Division 4—Provisions about particular orders

Subdivision 1—Examination orders

39 Judicial registrar’s power to conduct examinations

(1) A judicial registrar may conduct an examination under an examination order.

(2) For those applications, the judicial registrar constitutes, and may exercise all the jurisdiction and powers of, the court.

(3) However, a judicial registrar may not exercise any power of the court to punish for contempt.

40 Privilege—examination order

(1) A person examined under an examination order is not excused from answering a question, or from producing a document or other thing, on the ground that—

- (a) answering the question or producing the document may tend to incriminate the person or make the person liable to a forfeiture or penalty; or
- (b) producing the document would be in breach of an obligation, whether imposed by an enactment or otherwise, of the person not to disclose the existence or contents of the document; or
- (c) answering the question or producing the document would disclose information that is the subject of legal professional privilege.

(2) A statement or disclosure made by a person in answer to a question asked in an examination under an examination order, or a document or other thing produced in the examination, is not admissible against the person in any civil or criminal proceeding, other than—

41 Offence to contravene examination order

A person who is required to attend an examination under an examination order under this part must not—

- (a) fail to attend as required by the order, unless the person has a reasonable excuse; or
- (b) fail to attend from day to day until the conclusion of the examination, unless the person has a reasonable excuse; or

- (c) fail to take an oath for the purpose of the examination; or
- (d) fail to answer a question that the person is directed to answer by the court or judicial registrar; or
- (e) make a statement in the examination that is false or misleading in a material particular.

Maximum penalty—100 penalty units or 2 years imprisonment.

Subdivision 2—Property particulars orders

42 Privilege—property particulars order

(1) A person directed under a property particulars order to give a statement to the commission or the public trustee is not excused from giving the statement or including particulars in the statement on the ground that the statement or particulars may tend to incriminate the person or make the person liable to a forfeiture or penalty.

(2) If a person gives a statement to the commission or the public trustee under a property particulars order, the statement is not admissible against the person in any criminal proceeding other than a proceeding about the false or misleading nature of the statement.

Subdivision 3—Property seizure orders

43 If property seizure order directed to commission officer

(1) This section applies if the Supreme Court makes a property seizure order that is directed to a commission officer.

(2) The order—

- (a) is taken to be a search warrant issued by a Supreme Court judge under the Crime and Misconduct Act 2001 in relation to confiscation related evidence as defined under that Act; and
- (b) is taken to authorise a commission officer to exercise search warrant powers under the Crime and Misconduct Act 2001, section 92,⁸ including search warrant powers mentioned in section 92(2) and (3) or stated in the order, to the extent necessary for giving effect to the order.

8 Crime and Misconduct Act 2001, section 92 (Powers under search warrants)

(3) Property seized under the order is taken to have been seized under the Crime and Misconduct Act 2001.

(4) The Crime and Misconduct Act 2001, section 93⁹ applies to the order as if the order were a search warrant.

(5) It is sufficient compliance with the Crime and Misconduct Act 2001, section 93(1) for the commission officer to give the occupier of the place a copy of the order or, if the occupier of the place is not present, to leave the copy in a conspicuous place.

(6) The Crime and Misconduct Act 2001, sections 113 and 114¹⁰ do not apply to property seized under the order.

44 If property seizure order directed to police officer

(1) This section applies if the Supreme Court makes a property seizure order that is directed to a police officer.

(2) The order—

- (a) is taken to be a search warrant issued by a Supreme Court judge under the Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000 in relation to confiscation related evidence as defined under that Act; and
- (b) is taken to authorise a police officer to exercise search warrant powers under the Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000, section 74,¹¹ including search warrant powers mentioned in section 74(2) and (3), to the extent necessary for giving effect to the order.

(3) Property seized under the order is taken to have been seized under the Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000.

9 Crime and Misconduct Act 2001, section 93 (Copy of search warrant to be given to occupier)

10 Crime and Misconduct Act 2001, sections 113 (Application for order in relation to seized things) and 114 (Orders magistrate may make in relation to seized thing)

11 Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000, section 74 (Power under search warrants)

(4) The Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000, section 75¹² applies to the order as if it were a search warrant.

(5) It is sufficient compliance with the Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000, section 75(1) for the police officer to give the occupier of the place a copy of the order or, if the occupier of the place is not present, to leave the copy in a conspicuous place.

Note—

The Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000 provisions about applications for the return of things in the possession of the police service generally do not apply to things seized under a property seizure order.

Division 5—Notice of restraining order and other orders

45 Notice of restraining order and other orders

(1) This section applies if the Supreme Court—

- (a) makes a restraining order; or
- (b) makes another order under division 3¹³ in relation to a restraining order.

(2) As soon as practicable after the order is made, the commission must give each person whose property is restrained under the order and anyone else who is affected by the order a copy of the order.

(3) If the order directs the public trustee to take control of property, the commission must give the public trustee a copy of the order.

(4) However, if the application was made for the State by the commissioner of the police service, the commissioner of the police service—

- (a) must give the commission a copy of the order; and
- (b) must give the notice required to be given under subsection (2) or (3).

12 Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000, section 75 (Copy of search warrant to be given to occupier)

13 Division 3 (Making other orders)

(5) A restraining order, or another order under division 3, does not stop having effect only because a person required to be served under subsection (2) has not been served with a copy of the order.

Division 6—Sale of restrained property

46 Supreme Court may order sale of restrained property

(1) This section applies to restrained property under a restraining order only if the State applies to the Supreme Court for a forfeiture order for the property and the application has not been decided.

(2) The State may, when applying for the forfeiture order or at a later time, apply to the Supreme Court for an order directing the public trustee to sell all or part of the restrained property (“application property”).

(3) The State must give notice of the application to each person who has an interest in the application property.

(4) The Supreme Court may make the order if the court is satisfied, on evidence of the public trustee or otherwise—

- (a) the application property may deteriorate or lose value before the forfeiture order application is decided; or
- (b) the cost of controlling the application property would be more than the value of the property if it were disposed of after a forfeiture order was made.

(5) The proceeds of a sale under an order under this section are taken to be restrained under the restraining order applying to the application property.

Division 7—Exclusion of property from restraining orderSubdivision 1—Application by prescribed respondent47 Supreme Court may exclude prescribed respondent's property from restraining order

(1) The prescribed respondent under the restraining order may apply to the Supreme Court to amend the order to exclude particular property of the prescribed respondent from the order.

(2) The application must be made before the State applies for a forfeiture order to be made.

Note—

After the State applies for a forfeiture order, an application by a prescribed respondent may be made under section 65 or 66.

(3) The prescribed respondent must give notice of the making of the application and the grounds for the application to the State and anyone else who has an interest in the property.

(4) The State must be a party to the application.

(5) Anyone else who is given notice of the application may appear at the hearing of the application.

(6) If the State proposes to oppose the application, the State must give the applicant notice of intention to oppose the application.

(7) The State must give the applicant notice of the grounds for opposing the application.

(8) However—

(a) the State is not required to give the notice; and

(b) the application may not be heard;

until the DPP has had a reasonable opportunity to examine the applicant under an examination order, whether or not an examination order has already been made.

48 When Supreme Court may exclude prescribed respondent's property

(1) The Supreme Court may exclude the prescribed respondent's property from the order if—

- (a) it is satisfied it is more probable than not that the property to which the application relates is not illegally acquired property; and
- (b) the property is unlikely to be required to satisfy a proceeds assessment order.

(2) Also, the Supreme Court may exclude the prescribed respondent's property from the order if it is satisfied it is in the public interest to amend the order in the particular circumstances.

Subdivision 2—Application by person other than prescribed respondent49 Supreme Court may exclude other property from restraining order

(1) If the Supreme Court makes a restraining order, a person other than the prescribed respondent (the “applicant”) whose property is restrained under the order may apply to the court to amend the order to exclude the applicant's property from the order.

(2) The applicant must give notice of the making of the application and the grounds for the application to the State and anyone else who has an interest in the property.

(3) The State must be a party to the application.

(4) Anyone else who is given notice of the application may appear at the hearing of the application.

(5) If the State proposes to oppose the application, the State must give the applicant notice of intention to oppose the application.

(6) The State must give the applicant notice of the grounds for opposing the application.

(7) However—

- (a) the State is not required to give the notice; and
- (b) the application may not be heard;

until the DPP has had a reasonable opportunity to examine the applicant under an examination order, whether or not an examination order has already been made.

50 When Supreme Court may exclude applicant's property

(1) The Supreme Court may exclude the applicant's property from the order if it is satisfied the applicant acquired the property—

- (a) in good faith and for sufficient consideration; and
- (b) without knowing, and in circumstances not likely to arouse a reasonable suspicion, that the property was illegally acquired property.

(2) The Supreme Court may make the order only to the extent to which the interest in the property concerned was not, when it first became illegally acquired property, acquired using the proceeds of an illegal activity.

(3) In addition, the Supreme Court may exclude the applicant's property from the order if it is satisfied it is in the public interest to amend the order in the particular circumstances.

Division 8—Other provisions about restraining orders

51 Recording of restraining order

(1) This section applies if a restraining order applies to property of a particular kind and a law, whether or not a law of the State, provides for the registration of title to, an interest in, or a charge over, property of that kind.

(2) On the application of the commission or the commissioner of the police service, the authority responsible for administering the law must record the particulars of the relevant restraining order in the register kept under the law.

(3) Subsection (2) applies even though a relevant document of title is not produced to a registrar or any other person.

(4) Unless the contrary is proved, a person who later deals with property for which particulars are recorded under subsection (2) is taken to have had notice of the relevant restraining order.

(5) If the Land Title Act 1994 applies to the property, the commission or the commissioner of the police service may lodge, and the registrar of titles must register, a caveat over the property under that Act.

(6) As soon as practicable after the relevant restraining order stops having effect in relation to the property—

- (a) the commission or the commissioner of the police service must apply for cancellation of the record of the order; and
- (b) the authority responsible for administering the relevant law must take the steps necessary to cancel the record.

(7) Also, if the commission or the commissioner of the police service lodged a caveat over the property under subsection (5), as soon as practicable after the relevant restraining order stops having effect in relation to the property, the commission or the commissioner of the police service must withdraw the caveat.

52 Contravention of restraining order

(1) A person who conceals restrained property or does another act or makes another omission in relation to restrained property with the intention of directly or indirectly defeating the operation of the restraining order commits a crime.

Maximum penalty—350 penalty units or 7 years imprisonment.

(2) It is a defence to a charge of an offence against subsection (1) for the person to prove that the person had no notice that the property was restrained under a restraining order and no reason to suspect it was.

(3) A dealing with property in contravention of subsection (1) is void unless it was either for sufficient consideration or in favour of a person who acted in good faith.

53 Restraining order does not prevent other action under this Act

A restraining order does not prevent the enforcement of any other order made under this Act against restrained property under a restraining order.

54 Effect of dismissal of particular applications on restraining order

(1) This section applies if, while a restraining order is in force over property, the Supreme Court dismisses an application for—

- (a) a forfeiture order for the property; or
- (b) a proceeds assessment order against the person whose property is restrained under the restraining order.

(2) The Supreme Court may—

- (a) if the court considers it appropriate, make an order extending the operation of the restraining order for a stated period or in stated circumstances; or
- (b) make another order the court considers appropriate about the operation of the restraining order.

(3) An order under subsection (2) may be made to take effect immediately, at a stated time, or when a stated event happens.

55 Authority under restraining order

A restraining order is sufficient authority for a person to whom the order is directed to take all steps necessary or desirable to give effect to the order.

PART 4—FORFEITURE ORDERS

Division 1—Making and effect of forfeiture orders

56 Application for forfeiture order

(1) The State may apply to the Supreme Court for an order (“forfeiture order”) forfeiting to the State particular property restrained under a restraining order.

(2) The application may include particulars of any encumbrance over the restrained property that an appropriate officer considers an encumbrancee took in good faith, for valuable consideration, and in the ordinary course of the encumbrancee’s business.

57 Notice of application

(1) The commission or, if the application is made for the State by a police officer, the commissioner of the police service must give written notice of the application to each person whose property is restrained under the restraining order and anyone else the commission or the commissioner of the police service considers has an interest in the restrained property.

(2) A person given notice under subsection (1) may appear at the hearing of the application.

(3) Anyone else who claims any of the property may also appear at the hearing of the application.

(4) The absence of a person given notice under subsection (1) does not prevent the court from making a forfeiture order.

58 Making forfeiture order

(1) The Supreme Court must make a forfeiture order if the court finds it is more probable than not that—

- (a) for property restrained because of an application relating to property mentioned in section 28(3)(a) or (b)¹⁴—the prescribed respondent mentioned in that application engaged during the limitation period in a serious crime related activity; or
- (b) for property restrained because of an application relating to property mentioned in section 28(3)(c)—the property is serious crime derived property because of a serious crime related activity that happened during the limitation period.

(2) Subsection (1)(b) applies whether or not the person who engaged in the serious crime related activity because of which the property became serious crime derived property has been identified.

(3) However, for property mentioned in subsection (1)(b), the court must also be satisfied the commission or, if the application is made for the State by a police officer, the commissioner of the police service, has taken reasonable steps to identify and notify anyone with an interest in the property.

(4) Also, the court may refuse to make the order if the court is satisfied it is not in the public interest to make the order.

(5) A finding of the court under subsection (1)—

- (a) need not be based on a finding about the commission of a particular offence; and

14 Section 28 (Application for restraining order)

- (b) may be based on a finding that some offence that is a serious crime related activity was committed.

(6) Also, the raising of a doubt whether a person engaged in a serious crime related activity is not of itself enough to avoid a finding on which a forfeiture order may be made.

(7) The forfeiture order must state the property to which it applies.

Note—

Property may be excluded from the effect of a forfeiture order if it has been excluded under section 47, 49 or 68.¹⁵

(8) The court may make the ancillary orders the court considers appropriate when it makes a forfeiture order or at a later time.

Example—

Ancillary orders for facilitating the transfer to the State of property forfeited to the State.

(9) In this section—

“limitation period”—

- (a) means the period of 6 years before the day the application for the order is made;
- (b) includes periods before and after the commencement of this section.

59 Effect of forfeiture order

(1) On the making of a forfeiture order the property the subject of the order—

- (a) is forfeited to the State; and
- (b) vests absolutely in the State.

(2) Subsection (1)(b) is subject to the provisions of this Act under which the Supreme Court may make orders about the property vested or to be vested in the State.

60 Dealing with forfeited property prohibited

(1) A person who conceals property that is the subject of a forfeiture order or does another act or makes another omission in relation to property that is the subject of a forfeiture order with the intention of directly or indirectly defeating the operation of the forfeiture order commits a crime.

Maximum penalty—350 penalty units or 7 years imprisonment.

(2) It is a defence to a charge of an offence against subsection (1) for the person to prove that the person had no notice that the property was the subject of a forfeiture order and no reason to suspect it was.

(3) A dealing with property in contravention of subsection (1) is void unless it was either for sufficient consideration or in favour of a person who acted in good faith.

61 Effect of quashing of conviction on forfeiture order

The quashing of a conviction for a serious crime related activity does not affect the validity of a forfeiture order made before or after the conviction was quashed and based on the serious crime related activity.

Division 2—Other orders

Subdivision 1—Orders for relief from hardship

62 Relief from hardship for dependants

(1) If the Supreme Court is satisfied the operation of a forfeiture order will cause hardship to a dependant of the person who will forfeit property under the order, the court may—

- (a) order the State to pay to the dependant out of the proceeds of the sale of the property the amount the court considers necessary to prevent hardship to the dependant; and

- (b) if the dependant is under 18 years old, make the ancillary orders the court considers necessary for ensuring the proper application of an amount to be paid to the dependant.

(2) The court must not make an order under subsection (1) in favour of an adult dependant of a person whose serious crime related activity was the basis for the forfeiture order concerned unless the court is satisfied the dependant had no knowledge of any serious crime related activities of the person.

(3) In this section—

“dependant” of a person means a spouse or child of the person, or a member of the household of the person, dependent for support on the person.

Subdivision 2—Orders about encumbrances

63 Forfeiture order may provide for discharge of encumbrance

(1) If—

- (a) the Supreme Court is satisfied an encumbrancee took an encumbrance over property to be forfeited under a forfeiture order in good faith, for valuable consideration, and in the ordinary course of the encumbrancee’s business; and
- (b) the State gives an undertaking to apply the proceeds of disposing of the forfeited property towards discharging the encumbrance;

the court may make the orders about the encumbrance the court considers appropriate.

(2) The commission or, if the application is made by a police officer, the commissioner of the police service may give the undertaking for the State.

Subdivision 3—Releasing property from effect of forfeiture order

64 Order for release of property from forfeiture order

(1) The Supreme Court may order (“release order”) that a stated interest in property of a stated person that has been forfeited under a forfeiture order may be released from the forfeiture order on payment to the State of the amount the court decides is the value of the interest.

(2) The order must state the nature, extent and value, when the order is made, of the person's interest in the forfeited property.

(3) The court may make the order only if it is satisfied—

- (a) the interest is still vested in the State; and
- (b) it would not be against the public interest for the interest to be transferred to the person; and
- (c) there is no other reason the interest should not be transferred to the person.

Subdivision 4—Exclusion of property from forfeiture under exclusion order

65 Exclusion of property from forfeiture order application

(1) This section applies if an application for a forfeiture order has been made but the application has not been decided.

(2) A person, including a prescribed respondent, who claims an interest in property to which the application relates may apply to the Supreme Court for an exclusion order.

(3) The applicant must give notice of the making of the application and the grounds for the application to the State and anyone else who has an interest in the property.

(4) The State must be a party to the application.

(5) Anyone else who is given notice of the application may appear at the hearing of the application.

(6) If the State proposes to oppose the application, the State must give the applicant notice of intention to oppose the application.

(7) The State must give the applicant notice of the grounds for opposing the application.

(8) However—

- (a) the State is not required to give the notice; and
- (b) the application may not be heard;

until the DPP has had a reasonable opportunity to examine the applicant under an examination order, whether or not an examination order has already been made.

66 Exclusion of property from forfeiture order

(1) A person, including a prescribed respondent, who claims an interest in property that is forfeited under a forfeiture order may apply to the Supreme Court for an exclusion order.

(2) Unless the court gives leave under section 67—

- (a) the application must be made within 6 months after the forfeiture order was made; and
- (b) the following persons can not apply for an exclusion order—
 - (i) a person who was given notice of the application for the forfeiture order;
 - (ii) a person who appeared at the hearing of the application for the forfeiture order.

(3) For each application made under this section, including an application for leave the applicant must give notice of the making of the application and the grounds for the application to the State and anyone else who has an interest in the property.

(4) The State must be a party to the application.

(5) Anyone else who is given notice of the application may appear at the hearing of the application.

(6) If the State proposes to oppose the application, the State must give the applicant notice of intention to oppose the application.

(7) The State must give the applicant notice of the grounds for opposing the application.

(8) However—

- (a) the State is not required to give the notice; and
- (b) the application may not be heard;

until the DPP has had a reasonable opportunity to examine the applicant under an examination order, whether or not an examination order has already been made.

67 When Supreme Court may give leave for s 66

(1) The Supreme Court may give leave to apply for an exclusion order after the end of the 6 months mentioned in section 66(2)(a) if it is satisfied the delay in applying was not because of the applicant's neglect.

(2) Also, the Supreme Court may give a person mentioned in section 66(2)(b) leave to apply for an exclusion order only if it considers there are special grounds, including, for example—

- (a) for a good reason, the person did not attend the hearing of the application for the forfeiture order even though the person had notice of it; or
- (b) particular evidence proposed to be presented by the person in the application was not available to the person when the application for the forfeiture order was heard.

68 Making of exclusion order

The Supreme Court must, and may only, make an exclusion order if it is satisfied—

- (a) the applicant has or, apart from the forfeiture, would have, an interest in the property; and
- (b) it is more probable than not that the property to which the application relates is not illegally acquired property.

69 What exclusion order must state

(1) An exclusion order—

- (a) must state the nature, extent and, if necessary for the order, the value, when the order is made, of the applicant's interest in the property; and
- (b) if the application for the forfeiture order has not been decided, must exclude the applicant's property from the application for the forfeiture order; and
- (c) if a forfeiture order has been made for the property, and the property is still vested in the State, must direct the State to transfer the property to the applicant; and

- (d) if a forfeiture order has been made for the property and the property is no longer vested in the State, must direct the State to pay to the applicant the value of the applicant's property.

(2) However, if the applicant is the prescribed respondent and an application has been made for a proceeds assessment order against the prescribed respondent, subsection (1)(b) applies only if the court is satisfied the property is unlikely to be required to satisfy any proceeds assessment order the court may make against the person.

70 Effect of exclusion order

On the making of an exclusion order excluding an interest in property from an application for a forfeiture order, the restraining order applying to the restrained property stops having effect in relation to the excluded interest.

Subdivision 5—Exclusion of interest from forfeiture under innocent interest exclusion order

71 Exclusion of value of innocent interest from forfeiture order

(1) A person who has an interest in particular property to which a forfeiture order relates may apply to the Supreme Court for an innocent interest exclusion order.

(2) Unless the court gives leave under section 72—

- (a) the application must be made within 6 months after the forfeiture order was made; and
- (b) the following persons can not apply for an innocent interest exclusion order—
 - (i) a person who was given notice of the application for the forfeiture order;
 - (ii) a person who appeared at the hearing of the application for the forfeiture order.

(3) For each application made under this section, including an application for leave, the applicant must give notice of the making of the application and the grounds for the application to the State and anyone else who has an interest in the property.

(4) The State must be a party to the application.

(5) Anyone else who is given notice of the application may appear at the hearing of the application.

(6) If the State intends to oppose the application, the State must give the applicant—

- (a) notice of intention to oppose the application; and
- (b) the grounds for opposing the application.

72 When Supreme Court may give leave for s 71

(1) The Supreme Court may give leave to apply for an innocent interest exclusion order after the end of the 6 months mentioned in section 71(2)(a) if it is satisfied the delay in applying was not because of the applicant's neglect.

(2) Also, the Supreme Court may give a person mentioned in section 71(2)(b) leave to apply for an innocent interest order only if it is satisfied there are special grounds, including, for example—

- (a) for a good reason, the person did not attend the hearing of the application for the forfeiture order even though the person had notice of it; or
- (b) particular evidence proposed to be presented by the person in the application was not available to the person when the application for the forfeiture order was heard.

73 Making of innocent interest exclusion order

(1) The Supreme Court must, and may only, make an innocent interest exclusion order if the applicant proves it is more probable than not that a stated proportion of the value of the interest in property forfeited under the forfeiture order is not attributable to the proceeds of an illegal activity.

(2) The Supreme Court may make the order only to the extent to which the interest in the property concerned was not, when it first became illegally acquired property, acquired using the proceeds of an illegal activity.

74 What innocent interest exclusion order must state

An innocent interests exclusion order must—

- (a) state the nature, extent and, if necessary for the order, the value, when the order is made, of the interest mentioned in section 73(2); and
- (b) direct the State to pay to the applicant the value of the interest.

*Division 3—Release and buying back interests75 Effect of payment under release order

(1) On the payment to the State of the amount stated in a release order as the value of an interest in forfeited property, while the interest is still vested in the State, the forfeiture order ceases to apply to the interest.

(2) As soon as practicable after the amount is paid, the Attorney-General must arrange for the interest to be transferred to the person in whom it was vested immediately before the property was forfeited to the State.

(3) The Attorney-General may do or authorise the doing of anything necessary or convenient to be done for the transfer.

76 Buying out other interests under court order

(1) This section applies if—

- (a) property that is forfeited to the State under a forfeiture order is still vested in the State; and
- (b) the property or an interest in the property is required to be transferred to a person (the “buyer”) under an exclusion order or an innocent interest order or under section 75; and
- (c) the buyer’s interest in the property, immediately before the forfeiture, was not the only interest in the property.

(2) If the buyer intends to buy the other interests in the property, the buyer must give written notice to any other person who had an interest in the property immediately before the forfeiture stating—

- (a) the buyer intends to buy the other interests from the State; and

- (b) within 21 days after receiving the notice, the person may give the Attorney-General a written objection to the sale of the person's interest to the buyer.

(3) If—

- (a) the person given the notice does not give a written objection to the buying of the interest to the Attorney-General within the 21 days; and
- (b) the buyer pays to the State an amount equal to the value of the interest;

the Attorney-General must arrange for the interest to be transferred to the buyer.

(4) The Attorney-General may do, or authorise the doing of, anything necessary or convenient to be done for the transfer.

PART 5—PROCEEDS ASSESSMENT ORDERS

Division 1—Application for, and making of, proceeds assessment orders

77 Application for proceeds assessment order

(1) The State may apply to the Supreme Court for an order (“proceeds assessment order”) requiring a person to pay to the State the value of the proceeds derived from the person's illegal activity that took place within 6 years before the day the application for the order is made.

(2) The State must give notice of the application to the person against whom the order is sought and anyone else required under a regulation to be given notice.

(3) A person given notice under subsection (2) may appear at the hearing of the application.

(4) The absence of a person required to be given notice of the application does not prevent the Supreme Court from making a proceeds assessment order.

(5) The 6 years mentioned in subsection (1) includes periods before and after the commencement of this section.

78 Making of proceeds assessment order

(1) The Supreme Court must make a proceeds assessment order against a person if the court finds it is more probable than not that, at any time within the 6 years before the application was made, the person engaged in a serious crime related activity.

(2) However, the court may refuse to make the order if the court is satisfied it is not in the public interest to make the order.

(3) A finding of the court under subsection (1)—

- (a) need not be based on a finding about the commission of a particular offence; and
- (b) may be based on a finding that some offence that is a serious crime related activity was committed.

(4) The court may make the ancillary orders the court considers appropriate when it makes the proceeds assessment order or at a later time.

79 Amount must be stated in proceeds assessment order

(1) A proceeds assessment order must state, as the amount required to be paid to the State, the value of the proceeds derived from the person's illegal activity.

(2) The value of the proceeds must be assessed under division 2.

(3) However, the Supreme Court may, if it considers it appropriate, deduct from the value of the proceeds the value of any property forfeited under a forfeiture order made in relation to a person's illegal activities.

(4) In assessing the value of the proceeds, the Supreme Court is not limited to assessing the value of the serious crime related activity on which the application is based but must assess the value of other illegal activities of the person during the period to which the proceeds assessment order application relates.

80 Proceeds assessment order increase if forfeiture order discharged

(1) This section applies if—

- (a) the Supreme Court makes a proceeds assessment order; and

- (b) in deciding the value of the proceeds derived from a person's illegal activities, the court takes into account the value of property forfeited under a forfeiture order; and
- (c) after the proceeds assessment order is made, the forfeiture ends because of an appeal.

(2) The State may apply to the Supreme Court for a variation of the proceeds assessment order to increase the amount payable under the order.

(3) If the Supreme Court considers an increase appropriate, it may vary the amount payable under the proceeds assessment order.

Division 2—Assessment of value of proceeds

81 Application of div 3

(1) This division applies to—

- (a) property in Queensland or elsewhere; and
- (b) proceeds of an illegal activity, whether acquired in Queensland or elsewhere.

(2) Also, this division applies for assessing the value of the proceeds derived from an illegal activity of a person (“relevant person”).

82 Matters to which Supreme Court must have regard

(1) The Supreme Court must have regard to the evidence before it about the following—

- (a) the value of cash and other property that came into the possession or under the control of the relevant person or someone else at the request, or by the direction, of the relevant person, because of the illegal activity;
- (b) the value of any benefit provided for the relevant person or someone else at the request, or by the direction, of the relevant person, because of the illegal activity;
- (c) if the illegal activity involved a dangerous drug or controlled substance (the “illegal drug”)—

- (i) the market value, when the illegal activity happened, of a dangerous drug or controlled substance similar, or substantially similar, to the illegal drug; and
 - (ii) the amount that was, or the range of amounts that were, ordinarily paid for an act similar, or substantially similar, to the illegal activity;
 - (d) the value of the relevant person's property before, during and after the illegal activity;
 - (e) the relevant person's income and expenditure before, during and after the illegal activity.
- (2) The court—
- (a) may treat as the value of the proceeds the value the proceeds would have had if derived when the valuation is being made; and
 - (b) without limiting paragraph (a), may have regard to any decline in the purchasing power of money between the time the proceeds were derived and the time the valuation is being made.

83 How particular amounts may be treated

(1) This section applies if, at the hearing of an application for a proceeds assessment order—

- (a) evidence is given that the value of the person's property after an illegal activity was more than the value of the property before the activity; or
- (b) evidence is given of the amount of the person's expenditure within the 6 years before the day the application for the order was made.

(2) If subsection (1)(a) applies, the court must treat the difference as proceeds derived by the person from the activity, other than to the extent the court is satisfied the reason for the difference was not related to an illegal activity.

(3) If subsection (1)(b) applies, the court must treat the amount as proceeds derived by the person from an illegal activity, other than to the extent the court is satisfied the expenditure was funded from income, or amounts from other sources, not related to an illegal activity.

(4) The court must not take expenditure into account under subsection (3) to the extent the court is satisfied it resulted in the acquisition of property the value of which is taken into account under subsection (2).

84 Particular amounts not to be deducted

For this division, any expenses or outgoings incurred by the relevant person in relation to the illegal activity must be disregarded.

Example—

For deciding the value of the proceeds derived by the relevant person from an illegal activity involving the sale of dangerous drugs the person's expenses paid in acquiring the drugs must be disregarded.

85 Evidence by prescribed officer

(1) Despite any rule of law or practice about hearsay evidence, the court may, for this division, receive evidence of the opinion of a prescribed officer who is experienced in the investigation of illegal activities involving dangerous drugs about—

- (a) the market value at a particular time of a particular kind of dangerous drug or controlled substance; or
- (b) the amount, or range of amounts, ordinarily paid at a particular time for the doing of anything in relation to a particular kind of dangerous drug or controlled substance.

(2) In this section—

“prescribed officer” means—

- (a) a police officer; or
- (b) a member of the Australian Federal Police; or
- (c) an officer of customs within the meaning of the Customs Act 1901 (Cwlth); or
- (d) an authorised commission officer.

Division 3—Other provisions about proceeds assessment orders

86 Proceeds assessment order amount is debt payable to State

(1) The amount a person is ordered to pay to the State under a proceeds assessment order is a debt payable by the person to the State.

(2) The proceeds assessment order may be enforced as if it were a money order made by the Supreme Court in a civil proceeding taken by the State against the person for the recovery of the amount payable under the proceeds assessment order.

87 Enforcement of order against property under effective control

(1) The State may apply to the Supreme Court for an order declaring that particular property is under the effective control of a person against whom the court has made a proceeds assessment order (the “controlling person”).

(2) The commission or, if the application is made for the State by a police officer, the commissioner of the police service must give written notice of the application to—

- (a) the controlling person; and
- (b) anyone else the commission, or the commissioner of the police service, considers may have an interest in the property.

(3) The controlling person, and anyone else who claims an interest in the property, may appear at the hearing of the application.

(4) If the court is satisfied that the property is under the effective control of the controlling person, the court may make an order declaring that the property is available to satisfy the proceeds assessment order to the extent to which property of the controlling person is not readily available for the purpose.

(5) The proceeds assessment order may be enforced against the property, to the extent stated in the declaration, as if the property were the controlling person’s property.

(6) The court may also make a restraining order in relation to the property as if the property were the controlling person’s property.

(7) The absence of a person required to be given notice of the application does not prevent the court from making the order.

88 Charge on property

(1) On the making of a proceeds assessment order against a person, all the interests of the person in property are, while the amount payable under the order remains unpaid, charged in favour of the State to the extent necessary to secure payment of the amount.

(2) A charge created under subsection (1)—

- (a) is subject to every encumbrance on the property that came into existence before the charge and that would, apart from this paragraph, have priority over the charge; and
- (b) has priority over all other encumbrances; and
- (c) is not affected by any change of ownership of the interest charged, unless the charge stops having effect under subsection (3).

(3) The charge stops having effect if any of the following happens—

- (a) the proceeds assessment order is discharged on the hearing of an appeal against the making of the order;
- (b) the amount payable to the State is paid;
- (c) the person against whom the order is made becomes bankrupt;
- (d) the interest charged is sold or otherwise disposed of under this Act other than under a condition of a restraining order under this chapter or chapter 3 or by order of the Supreme Court under section 46 or 138;¹⁶
- (e) the interest charged is sold to a purchaser for sufficient consideration who, at the time of purchase, had no notice of the charge.

(4) If a law, whether or not a law of the State, provides for the registration of title to, interests in, or charges over, property charged under subsection (1), the public trustee or an appropriate officer may cause the charge to be registered under that law.

89 Effect of other actions on proceeds assessment order

(1) The quashing of a conviction for a serious crime related activity does not affect the validity of a proceeds assessment order.

(2) If a proceeds assessment order is made against a deceased, the order has effect before final distribution of the estate as if the person had died the day after the making of the order.

¹⁶ Section 46 (Supreme Court may order sale of restrained property) or 138 (Supreme Court may order sale of restrained property)

PART 6—GENERAL

90 Serious crime related activity can form basis of a number of orders

(1) The fact that a restraining order or a forfeiture order has been made on the basis of a person's serious crime related activity does not prevent the making of another restraining order or forfeiture order on the basis of that activity.

(2) Also, the fact that a forfeiture order has been made on the basis of a person's serious crime related activity does not prevent the making of a proceeds assessment order on the basis of that activity.

(3) In addition, the fact that a proceeds assessment order has been made on the basis of a person's serious crime related activity does not prevent the making of a forfeiture order on the basis of that activity.

91 Effect of death of person involved

(1) A notice authorised or required to be given under this chapter to a person who is dead is taken to have been given if it is given to the person's legal personal representative.

(2) A reference in this chapter to an interest in property of a person who is dead is a reference to an interest in the property the person had immediately before death.

(3) An order may be applied for and made under this chapter—

- (a) in relation to a person's interest in property even if the person is dead; and
- (b) on the basis of the previous activities of a person who is dead.

92 Effect of death of joint owner of restrained property

(1) This section applies only if a person who is a joint owner of restrained property under a restraining order dies while the restraining order is in force.

(2) The death of the person does not, while the order is in force, operate to vest the deceased's interest in the surviving joint owner or owners.

(3) Also, the restraining order continues to apply to the interest as if the person had not died.

(4) A forfeiture order applying to the interest applies as if the order took effect immediately before the person died.

(5) If a restraining order stops applying to property without a forfeiture order being made in relation to the property, subsection (2) is taken not to have applied to the property.

93 No stay of proceedings

The fact that a criminal proceeding has been started against a person, whether or not under this Act, is not a ground on which the Supreme Court may stay a proceeding against or in relation to the person under this chapter that is not a criminal proceeding.

CHAPTER 3—CONFISCATION AFTER CONVICTION

PART 1—PRELIMINARY

94 Explanation of ch 3

(1) This chapter enables proceedings to be started against a person to recover property and benefits derived from, and anything used for, or in the commission of, a confiscation offence, after the person has been charged with or convicted of the offence.

(2) It does this by enabling a court, as a preliminary step in appropriate cases, to make a restraining order preventing the property being dealt with without the court's leave.

(3) It also empowers the court to forfeit the following property to the State—

- (a) property used, or intended to be used, in or for the commission of a confiscation offence;

- (b) property derived from property mentioned in paragraph (a) or from the commission of a confiscation offence.

Note—

For matters that the court is to consider in deciding whether to forfeit property mentioned in paragraph (a), see section 151(2).¹⁷

(4) In addition, it provides a mechanism for—

- (a) preventing the disposal or concealment of property and benefits derived from the commission of a confiscation offence; and
- (b) depriving persons who have directly or indirectly benefited from the commission of a confiscation offence of the benefits derived from the offence.

95 Application of ch 3

(1) This chapter applies in relation to—

- (a) a confiscation offence committed or suspected of having been committed at any time, whether before or after the commencement of this Act; and
- (b) a person's conviction of a confiscation offence at any time, whether before or after the commencement of this Act.

(2) Subsection (1) applies subject to section 96.

96 Matters ch 3 does not apply to

(1) This chapter does not apply to a person's conviction of an offence if the person was convicted of the offence before 12 May 1989.

(2) Subsection (1) does not apply to interstate forfeiture orders, interstate pecuniary penalty orders or interstate restraining orders.

97 Application may be made for more than 1 order

Nothing in this chapter prevents a court hearing and deciding at the same time—

- (a) an application for a forfeiture order or pecuniary penalty order; and

¹⁷ Section 151 (Making forfeiture order)

- (b) an application under a Commonwealth law that makes provision substantially similar to this chapter.

98 Constitution of court

(1) This section applies—

- (a) if an application for a forfeiture order, pecuniary penalty order or restraining order is made to a court before which a person was convicted of a confiscation offence; and
- (b) whether or not the court is constituted in the same way as it was constituted when the person was convicted of the offence.

(2) The court—

- (a) may deal with the application; and
- (b) may perform any function and exercise any power in relation to the forfeiture order, pecuniary penalty order or restraining order, that the court may perform or exercise under this Act.

- (a) is about to be, or has been, charged with the confiscation offence to which an application for a restraining order, or a restraining order relates; or
- (b) has been convicted of the confiscation offence to which an application for a restraining order, or a restraining order relates.

“relevant offence” means the confiscation offence or confiscation offences to which an application for a restraining order, or a restraining order, under this part relates.

Division 2—Application for restraining order117 Application for restraining order

(1) The State may apply to the Supreme Court for an order (“restraining order”) restraining any person from dealing with property stated in the order (the “restrained property”) other than in a stated way or in stated circumstances.

(2) If the application is made in urgent circumstances or the prescribed respondent is about to be charged with a relevant offence, the application may be made without notice to the prescribed respondent or another person to whom it relates.

(3) The application must be supported by an affidavit of a police officer.

118 Affidavit—general requirements

The police officer’s affidavit must state the following—

(a) the confiscation offence on which the application is based;

- (c) if the basis of the application is the conviction of the prescribed respondent of the confiscation offence, details of the conviction;

- (e) details of the property sought to be restrained;
- (f) the police officer suspects the property sought to be restrained is the property of the person mentioned in the affidavit and the reason for the suspicion.

119 Particular requirements for affidavit relating to relevant property that is not prescribed respondent's property

(1) This section applies only if a police officer's affidavit relates to property of someone other than the prescribed respondent.

(2) This section is in addition to section 118.

(3) If the relevant offence is a serious drug offence, the police officer's affidavit must state—

- (a) the police officer suspects that the property is tainted property and the reason for the suspicion; or

(1) The State must give notice of the application to each person whose property is the subject of the application and anyone else the appropriate officer making the application for the State considers has an interest in the property.

Note—

Under the Uniform Civil Procedure Rules 1999, an application filed in a court must be served on each respondent at least 3 business days before the day set for hearing the application.

(2) The Supreme Court may, at any time before finally deciding the application, direct the State to give notice of the application to the persons the court considers appropriate in the way, and within the time, the court considers appropriate.

(3) A person whose property is the subject of the application, and anyone else who claims to have an interest in the property, may appear at the hearing of the application.

(4) This section does not apply in relation to a person whose property is the subject of the application if the application is made without notice to the person.

 - (c) a commission officer; or

- (a) in the absence of a person whose property is the subject of the application; and
 - (b) without the relevant person having been informed of the application.

Division 3—Making restraining orders and other orders

122 Making restraining order

(1) The Supreme Court may make a restraining order if, after considering the application and the relevant affidavit, it is satisfied that—

- (a) the application relates to a prescribed respondent; and
- (b) there are reasonable grounds for the suspicions on which the application is based.

(2) However, if the confiscation offence is a serious criminal offence, the court must make a restraining order unless the court is satisfied in the particular circumstances it is not in the public interest to make the order.

(3) The court may make a restraining order in relation to a prescribed respondent who is about to be charged with a confiscation offence only if the court is satisfied the prescribed respondent will be charged with the confiscation offence or a related offence within the next 48 hours.

(4) The court may refuse to make the restraining order if the State fails to give the court the undertakings the court considers appropriate for the payment of damages or costs, or both, in relation to the making and operation of the order.

(5) The DPP may give the court the undertakings the court requires.

(6) Also, the making of a restraining order does not prevent the person whose property is restrained under the order from giving Legal Aid a charge over the property as a condition of an approval to give legal assistance under the Legal Aid Act in relation to—

- (a) a proceeding under this Act; or
- (b) a criminal proceeding in which the person is a defendant, including any proceeding on appeal against conviction or sentence.

123 Absence of risk does not prevent making of order

The Supreme Court may make a restraining order against property whether or not there is a risk of the property being dealt with in a way that would defeat the operation of this Act.

124 Conditions of restraining order

(1) It is a condition of every restraining order that the person whose property is restrained under the order must preserve the property.

(2) The Supreme Court may impose the other conditions the court considers appropriate, including, but not limited to, the following—

- (a) a condition about who is to have possession of the property;
- (b) a condition of a kind mentioned in section 125 or 126.

125 Conditions about dealing with property by agreement

The Supreme Court may impose a condition authorising the DPP to agree to—

- (a) the disposal of the property restrained under the restraining order by its owner to enable the proceeds of the disposal to be applied to satisfy all or part of a debt payable under a pecuniary penalty order or a proceeds assessment order; or
- (b) the application of the property by its owner to satisfy all or part of a debt payable under a pecuniary penalty order or a proceeds assessment order.

126 Conditions about particular payments out of restrained property

(1) The Supreme Court may impose a condition providing for all or any of the following to be paid out of the property of a particular person, or a stated part of the person's property, restrained under the restraining order—

- (a) the person's reasonable living expenses and reasonable business expenses;
- (b) the reasonable living expenses of any of the person's dependants;
- (c) a stated debt incurred in good faith by the person.

(2) Subsection (1) is the only provision of this chapter under which provision may be made for the payment of expenses or a debt mentioned in subsection (1).

(3) Also, subsection (1) applies only if the court is satisfied—

- (a) the person can not meet the expense or debt out of property that is not restrained under the order; and
- (b) the property from which the expenses or debt are to be paid is not tainted property.

(4) Further, subsection (1) does not authorise the imposition of a condition providing for the payment of a person's legal expenses that are expenses payable because—

- (a) the person is a party to a proceeding under this Act; or
- (b) the person is a defendant in a criminal proceeding, including any proceeding on appeal against a conviction or sentence.

127 Restraining order may direct public trustee to take control of property

If the Supreme Court considers the circumstances require it, the court may, in a restraining order or a later order, direct the public trustee to take control of some or all of the property restrained under the order.

128 Duration of restraining order

(1) A restraining order made on an application made without notice to the person to whom it relates is in force for the period, of not more than 7 days, stated in the order or, if no period is stated, 7 days after it is made.

(2) However, a restraining order made on the basis of the proposed charging of the prescribed respondent with a confiscation offence lapses if the person is not charged with the offence or a related offence within 48 hours after the order is made.

(3) Otherwise, a restraining order is in force for the period stated in the order or, if no period is stated, for 1 year after it is made.

Division 4—Making other orders

129 Supreme Court may make other orders

(1) The Supreme Court may make the other orders in relation to a restraining order the court considers appropriate, including, but not limited to, orders mentioned in section 130.

(2) However, section 130(h) is the only provision of this chapter under which provision may be made for the payment of legal expenses that are expenses payable because—

- (a) the person is a party to a proceeding under this Act; or
- (b) the person is a defendant in a criminal proceeding, including any proceeding on appeal against a conviction or sentence.

(3) The court may make an order under this section—

- (a) when making the restraining order or, on application, at a later time; and
- (b) whether or not it affects a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order.

(4) Any of the following may apply for an order under this section—

- (a) the State;
- (b) the prescribed respondent;
- (c) a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order;
- (d) if the restraining order directs the public trustee to take control of the restrained property under the restraining order—the public trustee.

(5) Also, with the court's leave, a person other than a person mentioned in subsection (4) may apply for an order under this section.

(6) The applicant must give notice of the making of the application to each other person who could have applied for an order under this section.

(7) Subsection (6) does not apply to an application for an order under this section made in a proceeding on an application for a restraining order that is made without notice to any person to whom it relates.

130 Particular orders Supreme Court may make

For section 129, the orders are as follows—

- (a) an order varying the property restrained under the restraining order;
- (b) an order imposing additional conditions on the restraining order or varying a condition of the order;
- (c) an order (“examination order”) requiring a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order or a stated person to attend for examination on oath before the court or a judicial registrar about the following—
 - (i) the affairs of any person whose property is restrained under the restraining order;
 - (ii) the nature and location of any property of a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order;
 - (iii) the nature and location of any property restrained under the restraining order that the applicant for the order reasonably suspects is tainted property;
- (d) an order (also an “examination order”) requiring the spouse of a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order to attend for examination on oath before the court or a judicial registrar about the spouse’s affairs, including the nature and location of property in which the spouse or the person has an interest;
- (e) an order about the performance of an undertaking for the payment of damages or costs given for the restraining order;
- (f) an order (“property particulars order”) directing either of the following to give the DPP or the public trustee, within a stated time, a sworn statement of particulars of the property, or dealings with the property, in which the owner has or had an interest, as the court considers appropriate—

Division 5—Provisions about particular orders

Subdivision 1—Examination orders

131 Judicial registrar’s power to conduct examinations

(1) A judicial registrar may conduct an examination under an examination order.

(2) For those applications, the judicial registrar constitutes, and may exercise all the jurisdiction and powers of, the court.

(3) However, a judicial registrar may not exercise any power of the court to punish for contempt.

132 Privilege—examination order

(1) A person examined under an examination order is not excused from answering a question, or from producing a document or other thing, on the ground that—

- (a) answering the question or producing the document may tend to incriminate the person or make the person liable to a forfeiture or penalty; or
- (b) producing the document would be in breach of an obligation, whether imposed by an enactment or otherwise, of the person not to disclose the existence or contents of the document; or
- (c) answering the question or producing the document would disclose information that is the subject of legal professional privilege.

(2) A statement or disclosure made by a person in answer to a question asked in an examination under an examination order, or a document or other thing produced in the examination, is not admissible against the person in any civil or criminal proceeding, other than—

Maximum penalty—100 penalty units or 2 years imprisonment.

Subdivision 2—Property particulars orders134 Privilege—property particulars order

(1) A person directed under a property particulars order to give a statement to the DPP or the public trustee is not excused from giving the statement or including particulars in the statement on the ground that the statement or particulars may tend to incriminate the person or make the person liable to a forfeiture or penalty.

(2) If a person gives a statement to the DPP or the public trustee under a property particulars order, the statement is not admissible against the person in any criminal proceeding other than a proceeding about the false or misleading nature of the statement.

Division 6—Notice of restraining orders135 Notice of restraining order

(1) This section applies if the Supreme Court—

- (a) makes a restraining order; or
- (b) makes another order under division 4²⁶ in relation to a restraining order.

(2) As soon as practicable after the order is made, the DPP must give each person whose property is restrained under the order and anyone else who is affected by the order a copy of the order.

(3) If the order directs the public trustee to take control of property, the DPP must give the public trustee a copy of the order.

(4) The DPP must give the commissioner of the police service a copy of the order.

26 Division 4 (Making other orders)

Division 7—Extension and setting aside of restraining orders136 Extension of restraining order

- (c) a person whose property is restrained under the restraining order or who has an interest in the restrained property.

(3) The applicant must give notice of the application to the DPP and anyone else the applicant considers has an interest in the restrained property.

(4) A person given or entitled to be given notice under subsection (3) may appear at the hearing of the application.

(5) Without limiting subsection (1), the court may set aside a restraining order on the application of a prescribed respondent if the prescribed respondent—respondent on the prescribed respondent's conviction for the offence; or

- (b) gives undertakings satisfactory to the court about the prescribed respondent's property.

Division 8—Sale of restrained property

138 Supreme Court may order sale of restrained property

(1) This section applies to restrained property under a restraining order only if the State applies to a court for a forfeiture order for the property and the application has not been decided.

(2) The State may, when applying for the forfeiture order or at a later time, apply to the Supreme Court for an order directing the public trustee to sell all or part of the restrained property (“application property”).

Note—

The forfeiture order application may have been made in another court because the prescribed respondent was convicted before that court.

(3) The State must give notice of the application to each person who has an interest in the application property.

(4) The Supreme Court may make the order if the court is satisfied, on evidence of the public trustee or otherwise—

- (a) the application property may deteriorate or lose value before the forfeiture order application is decided; or
- (b) the cost of controlling the application property would be more than the value of the property if it were disposed of after a forfeiture order was made.

(5) The proceeds of a sale under an order under this section are taken to be restrained under the restraining order applying to the application property.

*Division 9—Exclusion of particular property from restraining order139 Supreme Court may exclude prescribed respondent’s property from restraining order

(1) A prescribed respondent whose property is restrained under a restraining order may apply to the court to amend the restraining order to exclude particular property of the prescribed respondent from the order.

(2) The court may exclude the prescribed respondent’s property from the order if it is satisfied—

- (a) the property is not tainted property; and
- (b) the relevant offence is not a serious criminal offence; and
- (c) a pecuniary penalty order can not be made against the prescribed respondent.

(3) Also, the court may exclude the prescribed respondent’s property from the order if it is satisfied it is in the public interest to amend the order having regard to all the circumstances, including—

- (a) a financial hardship or other result of the property remaining restrained under the order; and
- (b) the seriousness of the offence; and
- (c) the likelihood that the interest will be—
 - (i) liable to forfeiture under a forfeiture order; or
 - (ii) automatically forfeited; or
 - (iii) required to satisfy a pecuniary penalty order.

140 Supreme Court may exclude other property from restraining order

(1) A person, other than the prescribed respondent (the “applicant”), whose property is restrained under a restraining order may apply to the Supreme Court to amend the order to exclude the applicant’s property from the order.

(2) If the restraining order was made in relation to a serious criminal offence, the Supreme Court may exclude the applicant’s property from the order if the court is satisfied—

- (a) the property is not tainted property; and
- (b) the property is not under the prescribed respondent's effective control; and
- (c) the applicant was not in any way involved in the commission of the offence.

(3) If the restraining order was made in relation to an offence that is not a serious criminal offence, the Supreme Court may exclude the applicant's property from the order if the court is satisfied—

- (a) the interest is not tainted property; and
- (b) either—
 - (i) the applicant's property is not under the prescribed respondent's effective control; or
 - (ii) a pecuniary penalty order can not be made against the prescribed respondent.

(4) Also, the Supreme Court may exclude the applicant's property from the restraining order if the court is satisfied—

- (a) the applicant was not, in any way, involved in the commission of the offence; and
- (b) if the applicant acquired the property at the time of or after the commission, or alleged commission, of the offence, the applicant acquired the property—
 - (i) in good faith and for sufficient consideration; and
 - (ii) without knowing, and in circumstances not likely to arouse a reasonable suspicion, that the property was tainted property in relation to the offence.

(5) In addition, the Supreme Court may exclude the applicant's property from the order if the court is satisfied it is in the public interest to amend the order having regard to all the circumstances, including—

- (a) a financial hardship or other result of the property remaining restrained under the order; and
- (b) the seriousness of the offence; and
- (c) the likelihood that the interest will be—
 - (i) liable to forfeiture under a forfeiture order; or

- (ii) automatically forfeited; or
- (iii) required to satisfy a pecuniary penalty order.

141 Supreme Court may declare restrained property is not subject to automatic forfeiture

(1) This section applies only if the confiscation offence a prescribed respondent has been charged with, is about to be charged with, or has been convicted of, is a serious criminal offence.

(2) If the prescribed respondent has an interest in property restrained under a restraining order, the prescribed respondent may apply to the Supreme Court for a declaration that the property is not subject to automatic forfeiture.

(3) The court may make the declaration sought if it is satisfied—

- (a) the property was not used in, or in connection with, any illegal activity and was not derived by a person from illegal activity; and
- (b) the prescribed respondent's interest in the property was lawfully acquired.

Division 10—Other provisions about restraining orders

142 Restraining order to be registered

(1) This section applies if a restraining order applies to property of a particular kind and a law, whether or not a law of the State, provides for the registration of title to, an interest in, or a charge over, property of that kind.

(2) On the application of the DPP, the authority responsible for administering the law must record the particulars of the relevant restraining order in the register kept under the law.

(3) Subsection (2) applies even though a relevant document of title is not produced to a registrar or any other person.

(4) Unless the contrary is proved, a person who deals with property affected by a registered restraining order is taken to know of the restraining order.

(5) If the Land Title Act 1994 applies to the property, the DPP may lodge, and the registrar of titles must register, a caveat over the property under that Act.

(6) As soon as practicable after the relevant restraining order stops having effect in relation to the property—

- (a) the DPP must apply for cancellation of the record of the order; and
- (b) the authority responsible for administering the relevant law must take the steps necessary to cancel the record.

(7) Also, if the DPP lodged a caveat over the property under subsection (5), as soon as practicable after the relevant restraining order stops having effect in relation to the property, the DPP must withdraw the caveat.

143 Contravention of restraining order

(1) A person who conceals restrained property or does another act or makes another omission in relation to restrained property with the intention of directly or indirectly defeating the operation of the restraining order commits a crime.

Maximum penalty—350 penalty units or 7 years imprisonment.

(2) It is a defence to a charge of an offence against subsection (1) for the person to prove that the person had no notice that the property was restrained under a restraining order and no reason to suspect it was.

(3) A dealing with property in contravention of subsection (1) is void unless it was either for sufficient consideration or in favour of a person who acted in good faith.

144 Restraining order does not prevent other action under this Act

A restraining order does not prevent the enforcement of any other order made under this Act against restrained property under a restraining order.

145 Authority under restraining order

A restraining order is sufficient authority for a person to whom the order is directed to take all steps necessary or desirable to give effect to the order.

PART 4—FORFEITURE ORDERS

Division 1—Applications for forfeiture orders

146 Application for forfeiture order

(1) This section applies if a person is convicted of a confiscation offence.

(2) The State may apply to the Supreme Court or the court before which the person is convicted for an order (“forfeiture order”) forfeiting particular property to the State.

(3) The application may include particulars of any encumbrance over the restrained property that an appropriate officer considers an encumbrancee took in good faith, for valuable consideration, and in the ordinary course of the encumbrancee’s business.

(4) Unless the court gives leave, the application must be made within 6 months after the day the person is treated as if convicted of the offence because of section 106.²⁷

(5) If the application has been finally decided on the merits, the State may apply to a court under subsection (2) for a further forfeiture order against property relying on a person’s conviction of the confiscation offence to which the previous application relates only with the Supreme Court’s leave.

(6) The Supreme Court may give leave under subsection (5) only if it is satisfied—

- (a) the property to which the new application relates was identified only after the first application was finally decided; or
- (b) necessary evidence became available only after the first application was finally decided; or
- (c) it is otherwise in the interests of justice to give the leave.

147 Notice of application

(1) The State must give written notice of the application for the forfeiture order to the person whose conviction is the basis for the application and anyone else the appropriate officer making the application for the State considers has an interest in the property to which the application relates.

²⁷ Section 106 (Meaning of “convicted” of offence)

(2) A person given notice under subsection (1) may appear at the hearing of the application.

(3) Anyone else who claims an interest in the property may also appear at the hearing of the application.

(4) The absence of a person given notice under subsection (1) does not prevent the court from making a forfeiture order.

Division 2—Making and effect of forfeiture orders

148 Amendment of application

(1) A court hearing an application for a forfeiture order may amend the application at the request, or with the agreement, of the State.

(2) If the State applies for an amendment of an application for a forfeiture order and the proposed amendment would have the effect of including additional property in the application for the forfeiture order, the State must give written notice of the application for the amendment to—

- (a) the person whose conviction is the basis for the application for the forfeiture order; and
- (b) anyone else the appropriate officer making the application for the State considers may have an interest in property proposed to be included in the application for the forfeiture order.

(3) A person given notice under subsection (2) and anyone else who claims to have an interest in the additional property may appear at the hearing of the application to amend.

(4) The court may amend an application under this section to include additional property in the application only if the court is satisfied—

- (a) the property was not reasonably capable of identification when the application was originally made; or
- (b) necessary evidence became available only after the application was originally made.

149 Procedure on application

(1) In deciding an application for a forfeiture order, the court must have regard to the evidence given in any proceeding against the person for the confiscation offence on which the application is based.

(2) If—

- (a) the application is made to the court before which the person is convicted; and
- (b) when the application is made, the court has not passed sentence on the person for the confiscation offence;

the court may defer passing sentence until it has decided the application.

(3) If a person is treated as if convicted under section 106²⁸ because the offence is taken into account in sentencing the person for another offence, the reference in subsection (1) to a proceeding against the person for the offence includes a reference to the proceeding for the other offence.

150 Limitation on powers of Magistrates Courts

(1) A Magistrates Court may make a forfeiture order because of a conviction for an offence only if it is satisfied the total value of the property to be forfeited under the order and all other property forfeited under other undischarged forfeiture orders made by the court because of the conviction is not more than the limit of a Magistrates Court's civil jurisdiction.

(2) A Magistrates Court may make a forfeiture order for real property only as permitted under a regulation.

(3) For this section, the value of property is its value as decided by the court.

(4) In this section—

“Magistrates Court”, other than in relation to the limit of the court's civil jurisdiction, includes the Childrens Court constituted by a magistrate.

28 Section 106 (Meaning of “convicted” of offence)

151 Making forfeiture order

(1) The court may make a forfeiture order in relation to particular property if—

- (a) a person is convicted of a confiscation offence; and
- (b) the conviction is the basis for the application for the forfeiture order against the property; and
- (c) the court is satisfied the property, or an interest in the property, is tainted property; and
- (d) the court, having regard to subsection (2), considers it appropriate to make the order.

(2) For subsection (1)(d), the court may have regard to—

- (a) any hardship that may reasonably be expected to be caused to anyone by the order; and
- (b) the use that is ordinarily made, or was intended to be made, of the property; and
- (c) the seriousness of the offence concerned; and
- (d) anything else the court considers appropriate.

(3) The court must presume that particular property is tainted property if—

- (a) at the hearing of the application, evidence is presented that the property was in the person's possession at the time of, or immediately after, the commission of the offence concerned; and
- (b) no evidence is presented tending to show that the property is not tainted property.

152 Forfeiture order may provide for discharge of encumbrance

(1) If—

- (a) the court is satisfied an encumbrancee took an encumbrance over property to be forfeited under a forfeiture order in good faith, for valuable consideration, and in the ordinary course of the encumbrancee's business; and
- (b) the State gives an undertaking to apply the proceeds of disposing of the forfeited property towards discharging the encumbrance;

the court may make the orders about the encumbrance the court considers appropriate.

(2) The DPP may give the undertaking for the State.

153 Effect of forfeiture

(1) On the making of a forfeiture order, the property the subject of the order—

(a) is forfeited to the State; and

(b) vests absolutely in the State.

Note—

Under section 213, the State may not dispose of forfeited property during the appeal period as defined in that section.²⁹

(2) Subsection (1)(b) is subject to the provisions of this Act under which the Supreme Court may make orders about the property vested or to be vested in the State.

(3) The court that makes the forfeiture order may give any necessary or convenient directions for giving effect to the forfeiture.

Example—

If the person forfeiting the property is in possession of the forfeited property, the court may give directions about who is to have possession of the property.

Division 3—Orders releasing or excluding property from effect of particular orders

154 Order for release of property from forfeiture order

(1) A court that makes a forfeiture order may make an order under this section (“release order”) that a stated interest in property of a stated person that has been forfeited under a forfeiture order may be released from the forfeiture order on payment to the State of the amount the court decides is the value of the interest.

(2) The order must state the nature, extent and value, when the order is made, of the person’s interest in the forfeited property.

²⁹ Section 213 (Forfeited property not to be disposed of during appeal period)

- (3) The court may make the order only if it is satisfied—
- (a) the interest is still vested in the State; and
 - (b) it would not be against the public interest for the interest to be transferred to the person; and
 - (c) there is no other reason the interest should not be transferred to the person.

155 Exclusion of property from forfeiture order application

(1) A person, other than a person whose conviction is the basis for the application for the forfeiture order, who claims an interest in property included in an application for a forfeiture order may apply to the court to which the application for the forfeiture order is made for an order under section 158 (an “innocent interest exclusion order”).

(2) The applicant must give the DPP notice of the making of the application.

(3) The State must be a party to the application represented by the DPP.

156 Exclusion of property from forfeiture order

(1) A person, other than a person whose conviction is the basis for the application for the forfeiture order or the forfeiture order, who claims an interest in property forfeited under a forfeiture order may apply to the court that made the forfeiture order for an innocent interest exclusion order.

(2) Unless the court gives leave under section 157—

- (a) the application must be made before the end of the 6 months starting on the day the forfeiture order was made; and
- (b) the following persons can not apply under this section for an innocent interest exclusion order—
 - (i) a person who was given notice of the application for the forfeiture order;
 - (ii) a person who appeared at the hearing of the application for the forfeiture order.

(3) The applicant must give the DPP notice of the making of the application, including an application for leave.

(4) The State must be a party to the application represented by the DPP.

157 When court may give leave for s 156

(1) The court may give leave to apply for an innocent interest exclusion order after the end of the 6 months mentioned in section 156(2)(a) if it is satisfied the delay in applying was not because of the applicant's neglect.

(2) Also, the court may give a person mentioned in section 156(2)(b) leave to apply for an innocent interest exclusion order only if it is satisfied there are special grounds, including, for example—

- (a) for a good reason, the person did not attend the hearing of the application for the forfeiture order even though the person had notice of it; or
- (b) particular evidence proposed to be presented by the person in the application was not available to the person when the application for the forfeiture order was heard.

158 Making of innocent interest exclusion order

The court must, and may only, make an innocent interest exclusion order if it is satisfied—

- (a) the applicant has or, apart from the forfeiture, would have, an interest in the property; and
- (b) the applicant was not, in any way, involved in the commission of a relevant confiscation offence; and
- (c) the applicant acquired the interest—
 - (i) in good faith and for sufficient consideration; and
 - (ii) if the applicant acquired the interest at the time of or after the commission of the relevant confiscation offence—without knowing, and in circumstances not likely to arouse a reasonable suspicion, that the property was tainted property.

159 What innocent interest exclusion order must state

(1) An innocent interest exclusion order must—

- (a) state the nature, extent and, if necessary for the order, the value when the order is made, of the applicant's interest in the property; and

- (b) if the application for the forfeiture order has not been decided, exclude the applicant's property from the operation of any restraining order applying to the property and the application for the forfeiture order.

(2) If the applicant's property has been forfeited to the State and is still vested in the State, the order must also direct the State to transfer the property to the applicant.

(3) If the applicant's property has been forfeited to the State and is no longer vested in the State, the order must also direct the State to pay to the applicant the value of the applicant's property.

Division 4—Discharge of forfeiture orders

160 Discharge of forfeiture order

A forfeiture order is discharged if any of the following happens—

- (a) the conviction because of which the order was made is quashed;
- (b) a payment is made under a release order in relation to all of the interests in forfeited property;
- (c) the order is set aside under section 177;³⁰
- (d) the order is discharged on appeal.

PART 5—AUTOMATIC FORFEITURE

161 Definitions for pt 5

In this part—

“forfeiture period”, for a prescribed respondent, means the later of—

- (a) a period of 6 months starting on the day of the prescribed respondent's conviction of a serious criminal offence; or

30 Section 177 (Rehearing)

- (b) the 6 months mentioned in paragraph (a) as extended under section 163; or
- (c) if the prescribed respondent appeals against the conviction and the appeal is not decided within the 6 months after conviction, the period ending when the appeal is finally decided.

“prescribed respondent” means a person who is treated as if convicted of a serious criminal offence, other than because the person is unamenable to justice.

162 Application of pt 5

This part applies if—

- (a) a restraining order is, or was, granted for property, whether the property of a prescribed respondent or someone else, because of—
 - (i) the prescribed respondent’s conviction of the serious criminal offence; or
 - (ii) the charging, or proposed charging, of the prescribed respondent with the serious criminal offence or a related serious criminal offence; and
- (b) the Supreme Court has not made an order declaring that the property is not subject to automatic forfeiture;³¹ and
- (c) the restraining order is still in force when the forfeiture period ends.

163 Automatic forfeiture of restrained property

(1) Property of the prescribed respondent that was acquired after the day that is 6 years before the commission of the serious criminal offence and is restrained under the relevant restraining order is forfeited to the State when the forfeiture period ends.

(2) Property of another person that is restrained under the relevant restraining order is forfeited to the State when the forfeiture period ends.

(3) The 6 years mentioned in subsection (1) includes periods before and after the commencement of this section.

(4) However, before the end of the first 6 months of the forfeiture period, the prescribed respondent may apply to the Supreme Court for an extension of the forfeiture period for up to 3 months.

(5) The Supreme Court may extend the forfeiture period by not more than 3 months if it is satisfied it is in the interests of the administration of justice to extend the period in the special circumstances of the case.

164 Effect of automatic forfeiture

(1) Property automatically forfeited under this part vests absolutely in the State on its forfeiture to the State.

(2) On application, the Supreme Court may give any necessary or convenient directions for giving effect to the forfeiture.

165 Third party protection from automatic forfeiture

(1) A person, other than the prescribed respondent, who claims an interest in the property may apply to the Supreme Court for an order under section 167 (a “third party order”) or an order under section 169 (a “buy-back order”).

(2) Unless the court gives leave under section 166—

- (a) the application must be made within 6 months after the property is forfeited to the State; and
- (b) the following can not apply to the court for a third party order or a buy-back order—
 - (i) a person who was given notice of the application for the relevant restraining order;
 - (ii) a person who appeared at the hearing of the application for the relevant restraining order;
 - (iii) a person who was given notice of the relevant restraining order.³²

32 Sections 139, 140 and 141 also provide rights to apply to the Supreme Court to exclude property from the effects of a restraining order.

(3) The applicant must give the DPP notice of the making of an application under this section, including an application for leave to apply for a third party order or a buy-back order.

(4) The State must be a party to the application represented by the DPP.

166 When Supreme Court may give leave for s 165

(1) The Supreme Court may give leave to apply for a third party order or a buy-back order after the end of the 6 months mentioned in section 165(2)(a) if it is satisfied the delay in applying was not because of the applicant's neglect.

(2) Also, the Supreme Court may give leave for a person mentioned in section 165(2)(b) to apply for a third party order or a buy-back order only if it considers the failure of the applicant to apply, or apply successfully, to have the property excluded from the relevant restraining order was not because of the applicant's neglect.

(3) In this section—

“relevant restraining order”, for property automatically forfeited, means the restraining order made in relation to the forfeited property.

167 When Supreme Court may make third party order

(1) The Supreme Court may make a third party order if it is satisfied—

- (a) the applicant, apart from the forfeiture, would have an interest in the property; and
- (b) the applicant was not, in any way, involved in the commission of the relevant serious criminal offence; and
- (c) the applicant acquired the interest—
 - (i) in good faith and for sufficient consideration; and
 - (ii) if the applicant acquired the interest at the time of or after the commission of the relevant serious criminal offence—without knowing, and in circumstances not likely to arouse a reasonable suspicion, that the property was tainted property; and
- (d) the applicant's interest in the property was not under the prescribed respondent's effective control before it was forfeited.

(2) Also, the Supreme Court may make a third party order if it is satisfied—

- (a) the applicant, apart from the forfeiture, would have an interest in the property; and
- (b) the property was not used in, or in connection with, any illegal activity and was not derived by anyone from any illegal activity; and
- (c) the applicant's interest in the property was lawfully acquired.

168 What third party order must state

(1) A third party order must state the nature, extent and, if necessary for the order, the value, when the order is made, of the applicant's interest in the property.

(2) If the relevant property is still vested in the State, the order must also direct the State to transfer the property to the applicant.

(3) If the relevant property is no longer vested in the State, the order must also direct the State to pay to the applicant the value of the applicant's property.

169 When Supreme Court may make buy-back order

The Supreme Court may make a buy-back order if it is satisfied—

- (a) the applicant, apart from the forfeiture, would have an interest in the property; and
- (b) it would not be against the public interest for the relevant interest in the property to be transferred to the applicant; and
- (c) there is no other reason why the interest should not be transferred to the applicant.

170 What buy-back order must state

A buy-back order must state—

- (a) the nature, extent and value, when the order is made, of the interest; and
- (b) that the person may buy back the interest by paying to the State the amount stated as the value of the interest.

PART 6—OTHER PROVISIONS ABOUT FORFEITURE

171 Dealing with forfeited property prohibited

(1) A person who conceals property that is the subject of a forfeiture order or does another act or makes another omission in relation to property that is the subject of a forfeiture order with the intention of directly or indirectly defeating the operation of the forfeiture order commits a crime.

Maximum penalty—350 penalty units or 7 years imprisonment.

(2) It is a defence to a charge of an offence against subsection (1) for the person to prove that the person had no notice that the property was the subject of a forfeiture order and no reason to suspect it was.

(3) A dealing with property in contravention of this subsection (1) is void unless it was either for sufficient consideration or in favour of a person who acted in good faith.

172 Effect of payment under buy-back order or release order

(1) On the payment to the State of the amount stated in a buy-back order as the value of an interest in forfeited property, the effect of the forfeiture of the interest ends.

(2) On the payment to the State of the amount stated in a release order as the value of an interest in forfeited property, the forfeiture order applying to the interest ceases to apply to the interest.

(3) Subsections (1) and (2) have effect only if the payment is made while the interest is still vested in the State.

(4) As soon as practicable after the amount mentioned in the buy-back order or release order is paid, the Attorney-General must arrange for the interest to be transferred to the person in whom it was vested immediately before it was forfeited to the State.

(5) The Attorney-General may do or authorise the doing of anything necessary or convenient to be done for the transfer.

173 Buying out other interests under court order

(1) This section applies if—

- (a) property that is forfeited to the State under a forfeiture order or on automatic forfeiture is still vested in the State; and
- (b) the property or an interest in the property is required to be transferred to a person (the “buyer”) under an innocent interest exclusion order or a third party order or under section 172 or 175;³³ and
- (c) the buyer’s interest in the property, immediately before the forfeiture, was not the only interest in the property.

(2) If the buyer intends to buy the other interests in the property, the buyer must give written notice to any other person who had an interest in the property immediately before the forfeiture stating—

- (a) the buyer intends to buy the other interests from the State; and
- (b) within 21 days after receiving the notice, the person may give the Attorney-General a written objection to the sale of the person’s interest to the buyer.

(3) If—

- (a) a person given a notice under subsection (2) does not give the Attorney-General a written objection to the sale of the interest to the buyer within the 21 days; and
- (b) the buyer pays to the State an amount equal to the value of the interest;

the Attorney-General must arrange for the interest to be transferred to the buyer.

(4) The Attorney-General may do, or authorise the doing of, anything necessary or convenient to be done for the transfer.

174 Notice after conviction quashed or forfeiture order discharged

(1) This section applies if a relevant event happens.

33 Section 172 (Effect of payment under buy-back order or release order) or 175 (If Attorney-General asked to return property)

(2) As soon as practicable after a relevant event happens, the DPP must give notice of the happening of the relevant event to each person the DPP considers may have had an interest in the property to which it relates immediately before it was vested in the State.

(3) If required by a court, the DPP must also give notice of the happening of the relevant event to the persons the court considers appropriate, in the way and within the time the court considers appropriate.

(4) If the property is still vested in the State, the notice must include a statement to the effect that a person who had an interest in the property immediately before the property was vested in the State may, by written notice given to the Attorney-General, ask for the return of the property.

(5) If the property is no longer vested in the State, the notice must include a statement to the effect that a person who had an interest in the property immediately before the property was vested in the State may apply for an order declaring the value of the property—

- (a) if the property was forfeited under a forfeiture order—to the court that made the forfeiture order; or
- (b) if the property was automatically forfeited—to the court that made the restraining order applying to the property.

(6) In this section—

“relevant event” means—

- (a) for property forfeited to the State under a forfeiture order—
 - (i) the discharge of the forfeiture order on appeal under section 263;³⁴ or
 - (ii) the quashing of the conviction on which the forfeiture order was based; or
- (b) for automatically forfeited property—the quashing of the conviction because of which the property was automatically forfeited.

175 If Attorney-General asked to return property

(1) This section applies if a person is given a notice under section 174 relating to property that is still vested in the State.

34 Section 263 (Appeals)

(2) The person may, in writing, ask the Attorney-General to return the property to the person.

(3) As soon as practicable after receiving the notice, the Attorney-General must arrange for the property to be transferred to the applicant or someone else nominated by the applicant.

(4) However, if the State has paid an amount to the person in relation to the property under an innocent interest exclusion order or a third party order, the Attorney-General must not arrange for the transfer of the property until the person pays to the State the total amount paid by the State in relation to the property under the relevant order.

(5) The Attorney-General may do or authorise the doing of anything necessary or convenient to be done for the transfer.

176 If application for order declaring value of property

(1) This section applies if a person is given a notice under section 174 relating to property that is no longer vested in the State.

(2) The person may apply for an order declaring the value of forfeited property—

- (a) if the property was forfeited under a forfeiture order—to the court that made the forfeiture order; or
- (b) if the property was automatically forfeited—to the court that made the restraining order applying to the property.

(3) The court must make an order declaring the value, at the time of the declaration, of the property.

(4) The court may make the other orders the court consider appropriate.

(5) After the court makes the order, the applicant for the order may, by written application to the Attorney-General, ask for payment of the amount declared by the order to be the value of the property.

(6) The Attorney-General must arrange for payment to the applicant, or someone else nominated by the applicant, of the amount declared by the order less the total amount paid by the State for the relevant property because of an innocent interest exclusion order or a third party order.

177 Rehearing

(1) This section applies if a forfeiture order has been made against a person who was charged with a confiscation offence on the ground that the person is treated as having been convicted of the offence because the person has become unamenable to justice for the offence.

(2) The person or the State may apply to the court that made the forfeiture order to have the order set aside.

(3) If the applicant is not the State, the applicant must give notice of the application to the Attorney-General.

(4) The Attorney-General may appear to oppose the grant of the application.

(5) The court may set aside the forfeiture order on the conditions about costs or otherwise the court considers appropriate.

(6) If the court sets aside the order, the court may rehear the application for the forfeiture order immediately or at a later time fixed by the court.

PART 7—PECUNIARY PENALTY ORDERS

Division 1—Application for pecuniary penalty order

178 Pecuniary penalty order application

(1) If a person is convicted of a confiscation offence, the State may apply to the Supreme Court or the court before which the person is convicted for an order (“pecuniary penalty order”) requiring the person to pay to the State the amount of the benefits derived from the commission of the confiscation offence.

(2) Unless the court gives leave, the application must be made within 6 months after the day the person is treated as if convicted of the offence because of section 106.³⁵

(3) The State may apply to a court for a further pecuniary penalty order for the benefits derived by the person from the commission of a

35 Section 106 (Meaning of “convicted” of offence)

confiscation offence to which an application for an earlier pecuniary penalty order relates (“first application”) only with the Supreme Court’s leave.

(4) The Supreme Court may give leave under subsection (3) only if it is satisfied—

- (a) the benefit to which the new application relates was identified only after the first application was finally decided; or
- (b) necessary evidence became available only after the first application was finally decided; or
- (c) it is otherwise in the interests of justice to give the leave.

179 Notice of application

The State must give written notice of the application for the pecuniary penalty order to the person named in the application.

180 Right to appear

A person named in the application for the pecuniary penalty order may appear at the hearing of the application.

181 Amendment of application

(1) The court hearing the application for the pecuniary penalty order may amend the application at the request, or with the agreement, of the State.

(2) If the State applies for an amendment of the application and the amendment would have the effect of including an additional benefit in the application, the State must give the person named in the application written notice of the application for the amendment.

(3) The court may amend the application to include an additional benefit in the application only if the court is satisfied—

- (a) the benefit was not reasonably capable of identification when the application was originally made; or
- (b) necessary evidence became available only after the application was originally made.

182 Procedure on application

(1) In deciding an application for a pecuniary penalty order, the court must have regard to the evidence given in any proceeding against the person for the relevant confiscation offence.

(2) If—

- (a) the application is made to the court before which the person is convicted; and
- (b) when the application is made, the court has not passed sentence on the person for the confiscation offence;

the court may defer passing sentence until it has decided the application.

(3) If a person is treated as if convicted under section 106 because the offence is taken into account in sentencing the person for another offence, the reference in subsection (1) to a proceeding against the person for the offence includes a reference to the proceeding for the other offence.

183 Limitation on powers of Magistrates Courts

(1) A Magistrates Court may make a pecuniary penalty order because of a conviction for an offence only if it is satisfied the total amount payable under the pecuniary penalty order and all other undischarged pecuniary penalty orders made by the court because of the conviction is not more than the limit of a Magistrates Court's civil jurisdiction.

(2) In this section—

“Magistrates Court”, other than in relation to the limit of the court's civil jurisdiction, includes the Childrens Court constituted by a magistrate.

Division 2—Making of pecuniary penalty order

184 Pecuniary penalty orders

(1) On an application for a pecuniary penalty order against a person, the court may or, if the offence is a serious drug offence, must—

- (a) assess the value of the benefits derived by the person under division 3; and

- (b) order the person to pay to the State a pecuniary penalty equal to the assessed value of the benefits less the amounts deducted under subsections (2) and (3).

(2) The value, when the pecuniary penalty order is made, of any property for which a forfeiture order is made for the same conviction must be deducted.

(3) The court may also deduct either of the following amounts, if the court considers it appropriate to take the amount into account—

- (a) any amount payable for restitution or compensation for the same conviction;
- (b) the value of any property forfeited under a forfeiture order under chapter 2 made in relation to a period including the day the offence to which the conviction relates was committed.

(4) The amount payable by the person to the State under the pecuniary penalty order is a debt payable by the person to the State.

(5) The order may be enforced as if it were a money order made by a court in a civil proceeding taken by the State against the person for the recovery of the amount payable under the pecuniary penalty order.

185 Discharge of pecuniary penalty order to the extent of automatic forfeiture

(1) This section applies to a person who has been convicted of a serious criminal offence and against whom a pecuniary penalty order has been made because of the conviction.

(2) If property of the person is also automatically forfeited to the State because of the conviction, the debt payable under the pecuniary penalty order is discharged to the extent of—

- (a) if the property is sold—the value of the proceeds of the sale; or
- (b) if the property is not sold—the amount the Attorney-General decides is the reasonable value of the property.

186 Pecuniary penalty order increase if forfeiture order discharged

(1) This section applies if—

- (a) a court makes a pecuniary penalty order; and

- (b) in deciding the amount payable under the pecuniary penalty order, the court takes into account the value of property forfeited under a forfeiture order; and
- (c) after the pecuniary penalty order is made, the forfeiture ends because of an appeal.

(2) The State may apply to the court that made the pecuniary penalty order for a variation of the order to increase the amount payable under the order.

(3) If the court considers an increase appropriate, it may vary the amount payable under the pecuniary penalty order.

Division 3—Assessment of benefits

187 Assessment of benefits

(1) When assessing the value of benefits derived by a person from the commission of a confiscation offence for the purposes of making a pecuniary penalty order against a person (“relevant person”), the court must have regard to the evidence before it about the following—

- (a) the value of cash and other property that came into the possession or under the control of the relevant person or someone else at the request, or by the direction, of the relevant person, because of the commission of the offence;
- (b) the value of any benefit provided for the relevant person or someone else at the request, or by the direction, of the relevant person because of the commission of the offence;
- (c) if the offence consisted of the doing of an act or thing in relation to a dangerous drug or controlled substance (the “illegal drug”)—
 - (i) the market value, when the offence was committed, of a dangerous drug or controlled substance similar, or substantially similar, to the illegal drug involved in the offence; and
 - (ii) the amount that was, or the range of amounts that were, ordinarily paid for the doing of a similar, or substantially similar, act or thing;

- (d) the value of the relevant person's property—
 - (i) if the application relates to a single offence—before, during and after the commission of the offence; or
 - (ii) if the application relates to 2 or more offences—before, during and after the offence period;
- (e) the relevant person's income and expenditure—
 - (i) if the application relates to a single offence—before, during and after the commission of the offence; or
 - (ii) if the application relates to 2 or more offences—before, during and after the offence period.

(2) The court—

- (a) may treat as the value of the benefit the value the benefit would have had if derived when the valuation is being made; and
- (b) without limiting paragraph (a), may have regard to any decline in the purchasing power of money between the time the benefit was derived and the time the valuation is being made.

(3) In this section—

“offence period”, for an application for a pecuniary penalty order made in relation to 2 or more offences, means the period starting when the earlier or earliest of the offences was committed and ending when the later or latest of the offences was committed.

188 Procedure if application relating to 1 confiscation offence

(1) This section applies if—

- (a) an application for a pecuniary penalty order relates to 1 confiscation offence; and
- (b) at the hearing of the application, evidence is given that the value of the person's property after the commission of the confiscation offence was more than the value of the property before the commission of the offence.

(2) The court must treat the difference as the benefits derived by the person from the commission of the offence, other than to the extent the court is satisfied the reason for the difference was not related to the commission of the offence.

189 Procedure if application relating to more than 1 confiscation offence

(1) This section applies if—

- (a) an application for a pecuniary penalty order relates to more than 1 confiscation offence; and
- (b) at the hearing of the application, evidence is given that the value of the person's property at any time during or after the offence period was more than the value of the property before the start of the offence period.

(2) The court must treat the difference as the benefits derived by the person from the commission of the offences, other than to the extent the court is satisfied the difference was not related to the commission of the offences.

190 Property that may be taken into account for assessment

(1) For this division, the following property of a person is presumed, unless the contrary is proved, to be property that came into the possession or under the control of the person because of the commission of the offence or offences—

- (a) all property of the person when the application for the pecuniary penalty order is made; and
- (b) all property of the person at any time within the shorter of the following periods—
 - (i) the period between the day the offence, or the earliest offence, was committed and the day the application is made;
 - (ii) the period of 5 years immediately before the day the application is made.

(2) For subsection (1), property of a person that vests in the official trustee in bankruptcy because of the person's bankruptcy is taken to continue to be the property of the person.

191 Property under effective control

In assessing the value of benefits derived by a person from the commission of an offence, the court may treat as property of the person any property that, in the court's opinion, is under the person's effective control.

192 Particular benefits not to be taken into account

The court must not take into account a benefit for the purposes of a pecuniary penalty order if a pecuniary penalty has already been imposed because of the benefit under this Act or a law of the Commonwealth or another State.

193 Expenses and outgoings

(1) For this division, any expenses or outgoings of the person in, or in connection with, the commission of the offence or offences must be disregarded.

(2) In this section—

“commit” an offence includes attempt, conspire, plan and prepare to commit the offence.

“expenses or outgoings”, of the person, includes all costs and expenses incurred by the person in, or in connection with, committing the offence or offences.

Example of expenses or outgoings—

The cost of acquiring or attempting to acquire something concerned in committing the offence.

194 Evidence

(1) Despite any rule of law or practice about hearsay evidence, the court may, for this division, receive evidence of the opinion of a prescribed officer who is experienced in the investigation of illegal activities involving dangerous drugs about—

- (a) the market value at a particular time of a particular kind of dangerous drug or controlled substance; or
- (b) the amount, or range of amounts, ordinarily paid at a particular time for the doing of anything in relation to a particular kind of dangerous drug or controlled substance.

(2) In this section—

“prescribed officer” means—

- (a) a police officer; or
- (b) a member of the Australian Federal Police; or

- (c) an officer of customs within the meaning of the Customs Act 1901 (Cwlth); or
- (d) an authorised commission officer.

Division 4—Other provisions

195 Discharge of pecuniary penalty order

(1) A pecuniary penalty order is discharged if—

- (a) the conviction because of which the order was made is quashed; or
- (b) it is discharged on appeal.

(2) If the pecuniary penalty order is registered under the Service and Execution of Process Act 1992 (Cwlth), notice of the order's discharge must be given to the persons, in the way and within the time the court considers appropriate.

196 Charge on restrained property under restraining order if pecuniary penalty order made

(1) This section applies if—

- (a) a pecuniary penalty order is, or has been, made against a person convicted of a confiscation offence (the “prescribed respondent”); and
- (b) a restraining order is, or has been, made against the property of a person, whether the prescribed respondent or someone else, based on—
 - (i) the prescribed respondent's conviction of the confiscation offence; or
 - (ii) the charging, or proposed charging, of the prescribed respondent with the confiscation offence or a related indictable offence.

(2) A charge on the property that secures the payment to the State of the amount payable under the pecuniary penalty order comes into existence on the making of whichever is the later of the pecuniary penalty order or the restraining order.

(3) The charge ceases to have effect if—

- (a) the pecuniary penalty order is discharged; or
- (b) the pecuniary penalty is paid; or
- (c) the property is disposed of under an order under section 219;³⁶ or
- (d) the property is disposed of with the approval of—
 - (i) the Supreme Court; or
 - (ii) if the public trustee has been directed to take control of the property—the public trustee; or
- (e) the property is sold to a buyer in good faith for sufficient consideration and without notice of the charge.

(4) The charge is subject to every encumbrance over the property that was in existence immediately before the pecuniary penalty order was made but has priority over all other encumbrances.

(5) Subject to subsection (3), the charge remains on the property despite any disposal of the property.

(6) The charge may be registered under a law that provides for the registration of charges on property of the type affected by the charge.

(7) If the charge is registered under subsection (6), a person who buys the property after the registration of the charge is, for the purposes of subsection (3)(e), taken to have had notice of the charge.

197 Pecuniary penalty order to be registered

(1) This section applies if a pecuniary penalty order has been made against a person.

(2) The registrar of titles and any other person responsible for keeping registers relating to property must, on request and on production to the person of sufficient evidence of the order, record in the appropriate register a statement that the pecuniary penalty order has been made.

(3) This section is to be given effect even though a relevant document of title is not produced to a registrar or any other person.

(4) This section applies despite any other Act.

³⁶ Section 219 (Public trustee may apply for order for satisfying liability because of confiscation order or automatic forfeiture)

198 Application of property under effective control for satisfying pecuniary penalty order

(1) The State may apply to a court for an order declaring that particular property is under the effective control of a person against whom the court has made a pecuniary penalty order (the “controlling person”).

(2) The State must give written notice of the application to—

- (a) the controlling person; and
- (b) anyone else the appropriate officer making the application for the State considers may have an interest in the property.

(3) The controlling person, and anyone else who claims an interest in the property, may appear at the hearing of the application.

(4) If the court is satisfied that the property is under the effective control of the controlling person, the court may make an order declaring that the property is available to satisfy the pecuniary penalty order to the extent to which property of the controlling person is not readily available for the purpose.

(5) The pecuniary penalty order may be enforced against the property, to the extent stated in the declaration, as if the property were the controlling person’s property.

(6) The court may also make a restraining order in relation to the property as if the property were the controlling person’s property.

(7) The absence of a person required to be given notice of the application does not prevent a court from making the order.

199 Rehearing

(1) This section applies if a pecuniary penalty order has been made against a person who was charged with a confiscation offence on the ground that the person is unamenable to justice.

(2) The person or the State may apply to the court that made the order to have the order set aside.

(3) If the applicant is the person against whom the order was made, the applicant must give notice of the application to the Attorney-General.

(4) The Attorney-General may appear to oppose the grant of the application.

(5) The court may set aside the order on the terms and conditions about costs or otherwise the court considers appropriate.

(6) If the court sets aside the order, the court may rehear the application for the order immediately or at a later time fixed by the court.

CHAPTER 4—SPECIAL FORFEITURE ORDERS

PART 1—SPECIAL FORFEITURE ORDER APPLICATION

200 Application for special forfeiture order

(1) This section applies if—

- (a) a person (the “prescribed respondent”) has been convicted of a confiscation offence; and
- (b) the prescribed respondent, or someone else for the prescribed respondent, has derived, is deriving, or is to derive, benefits (“benefits”) from a contract entered on or after 12 May 1989 (“relevant contract”) about either of the following—
 - (i) a depiction of the confiscation offence or alleged confiscation offence in a movie, book, newspaper, magazine, radio, or television production, or in any other electronic form, or live or recorded entertainment of any kind; or
 - (ii) an expression of the prescribed respondent’s thoughts, opinions or emotions about the confiscation offence or alleged confiscation offence.

(2) The State may apply to the Supreme Court at any time for an order (“special forfeiture order”) that the prescribed respondent pay to the State an amount equal to all or part of the prescribed respondent’s benefits under the relevant contract.

(3) This section applies to a contract made before or after the prescribed respondent’s conviction, whether in Queensland or elsewhere, including outside Australia.

201 Notice of application

(1) The State must give notice of the application to the prescribed respondent and anyone else mentioned in section 200(1)(b).

(2) The Supreme Court may, at any time before finally deciding the application—

- (a) direct the State to give notice of the application to the persons, in the way and within the time the court considers appropriate; or
- (b) amend the notice of application as it considers appropriate, either at the State's request or with the State's approval.

(3) Anyone given notice of the application may appear at the hearing of the application.

202 Making of special forfeiture order

(1) If the Supreme Court is satisfied the prescribed respondent has derived, is deriving or will derive benefits under the relevant contract, the court may make a special forfeiture order.

(2) The order must—

- (a) state, as the amount to be paid to the State, the amount assessed under part 2 as the value of the benefit derived under the relevant contract; and
- (b) direct any person who, under the relevant contract, is required to pay amounts to the prescribed respondent or another person, at the request or by the direction of the prescribed respondent, to pay the amounts to the State.

PART 2—ASSESSMENT OF BENEFITS203 Assessment of benefits

(1) When assessing the value of benefits derived or to be derived under a relevant contract, the Supreme Court must have regard to the evidence before it about the following—

- (a) the value of cash and other property that came into the possession or under the control of the prescribed respondent or someone else at the request, or by the direction, of the prescribed respondent because of the relevant contract;
 - (b) the value of any benefit provided for the prescribed respondent or someone else at the request or by the direction of the prescribed respondent because of the relevant contract;
 - (c) the value of the prescribed respondent's property before and after the making of the relevant contract;
 - (d) the prescribed respondent's income and expenditure before and after the making of the relevant contract.
- (2) The court—
- (a) may treat as the value of the benefit the value the benefit would have had if received when the valuation is being made; and
 - (b) without limiting paragraph (a), may have regard to any decline in the purchasing power of money between the time the benefit was received and the time the valuation is being made.

204 How particular amounts may be treated

(1) This section applies if, at the hearing of an application for a special forfeiture order, evidence is given that the value of the prescribed respondent's property after the making of the relevant contract was more than the value of the property before the making of the contract.

(2) The Supreme Court must treat the difference as the value of the benefit received by the person from the contract, other than to the extent the court is satisfied the reason for the difference was not related to the making of the contract.

205 Property that may be taken into account for assessment

(1) For this part, the following property of a person is presumed, unless the contrary is proved, to be property that came into the possession or under the control of the person because of the making of the relevant contract—

- (a) all property of the prescribed respondent when the application for the special forfeiture order is made; and

- (b) all property of the prescribed respondent at any time within the shorter of the following periods—
- (i) the period between the day the relevant contract was made and the day the application is made;
 - (ii) the 5 years immediately before the day the application is made.

(2) For subsection (1), property of a person that vests in the official trustee in bankruptcy because of the person's bankruptcy is taken to continue to be the property of the person.

206 Property under effective control

In assessing the value of benefits derived by a person from a relevant contract, the Supreme Court may treat as property of the person any property that, in the court's opinion, is under the effective control of the person.

207 Expenses and outgoings

For this part, any expenses or outgoings of the person in connection with the relevant contract must be disregarded.

PART 3—OTHER PROVISIONS

208 Application of property under effective control for satisfying special forfeiture order

(1) The State may apply to the Supreme Court for an order declaring that particular property is under the effective control of a person against whom the court has made a special forfeiture order (the “controlling person”).

- (2) The State must give written notice of the application to—
- (a) the controlling person; and
 - (b) anyone else the appropriate officer making the application for the State considers may have an interest in the property.

(3) The controlling person, and anyone else who claims an interest in the property, may appear at the hearing of the application.

(4) If the court is satisfied that the property is under the effective control of the controlling person, the court may make an order declaring that the property is available to satisfy the special forfeiture order to the extent to which property of the controlling person is not readily available for the purpose.

(5) The special forfeiture order may be enforced against the property, to the extent stated in the declaration, as if the property were the controlling person's property.

(6) The court may also make a restraining order in relation to the property as if the property were the controlling person's property.

(7) The absence of a person required to be given notice of the application does not prevent the court from making the order.

209 Effect of special forfeiture order

(1) The amount stated in a special forfeiture order is a debt payable by the prescribed respondent to the State.

(2) The special forfeiture order may be enforced as if it were a money order made by the Supreme Court in a civil proceeding taken by the State against the person for the recovery of the amount payable under the special forfeiture order.

(3) A person who pays an amount payable under a relevant contract to the State as directed under a special forfeiture order is discharged from the terms of the relevant contract.

210 Application of amounts paid to the State under this chapter

(1) The Governor in Council may direct that an amount paid to the State under a special forfeiture order must be applied to satisfy—

- (a) an order made under the Penalties and Sentences Act 1992 requiring the prescribed respondent to make restitution or pay compensation; or
- (b) an order made by a court requiring the prescribed respondent to pay damages to a person for injury suffered by the person because of the commission of the confiscation offence or alleged confiscation offence to which the relevant contract relates.

(2) If an order mentioned in subsection (1) has been made and has not been satisfied, the person in whose favour it was made may, within 5 years after the day the order was made, apply to the Attorney-General for the order to be satisfied out of money paid to the State under a special forfeiture order.

(3) After the end of the 5 years, money paid to the State under a special forfeiture order must be paid to the consolidated fund and any application by a person under subsection (2) is absolutely barred.

211 Special forfeiture order to be registered

(1) The registrar of titles and any other person responsible for keeping registers relating to property must, on request and on production to the person of sufficient evidence of a special forfeiture order record in the appropriate register a statement that the order has been made.

(2) This section is to be given effect even though any relevant document of title is not produced to a registrar or any other person.

(3) This section applies despite any other Act.

CHAPTER 5—PARTICULAR PROVISIONS ABOUT FORFEITURE OF PROPERTY

212 Chapter does not apply to particular property

This chapter does not apply to forfeited property that may be dealt with under the Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000, chapter 11, part 3, division 7.³⁷

213 Forfeited property not to be disposed of during appeal period

(1) Within the appeal period, the State must not, without the leave of the court that made the order forfeiting property or, for property that is automatically forfeited, the relevant restraining order—

- (a) dispose of property forfeited to the State under this Act; or
- (b) authorise anyone else to dispose of the property.

Note—

Under the Police Powers and Responsibilities Act 2000, section 440, forfeited property in the possession of the Police Service may not be dealt with until all proceedings for the offence or suspected offence for which the property was forfeited have been finally decided.

(2) When the appeal period ends, the State may dispose of the property unless—

- (a) if the property was forfeited under a forfeiture order—the relevant order has been discharged; or
- (b) if the property was automatically forfeited because of the conviction of a person of a serious criminal offence—the conviction of the person of the offence has been quashed.

(3) In this section—

“appeal period” means—

- (a) if the property was forfeited because of the conviction of a person of a confiscation offence—the period ending when all proceedings relating to the conviction are finally decided; or
- (b) for an appeal that may be started under section 263³⁸—the period for starting the appeal or, if an appeal is started, the period ending when the appeal is finally decided.

214 Disposal of forfeited property by State

(1) The Attorney-General may give directions about how property forfeited under this Act is to be dealt with.

(2) Also, the Attorney-General may authorise the chairperson, the DPP or a public service officer to give the directions for the Attorney-General.

(3) Without limiting subsection (1) or (2), a direction may provide for the payment to Legal Aid out of forfeited property, or the proceeds of the disposal of forfeited property, of amounts payable to satisfy a charge over the property in favour of Legal Aid.

(4) The Attorney-General may do or authorise the doing of anything necessary or convenient to be done for dealing with the property.

(5) The net proceeds of the disposal of property forfeited under chapter 2 must be paid to the consolidated fund.
