

STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS (EXEMPTIONS FROM EXPIRY) AMENDMENT REGULATION 2017

Explanatory notes for SL 2017 No. 146

made under the

Statutory Instruments Act 1992

General Outline

Short title

Statutory Instruments (Exemptions from Expiry) Amendment Regulation 2017

Authorising law

Sections 56, 56A and 59 of the Statutory Instruments Act 1992

Policy objectives and the reasons for them

Part 7 of the Statutory Instruments Act 1992 (the Act) is designed to require regular review of Queensland's subordinate legislation by causing most subordinate legislation to automatically expire on 1 September first occurring after the tenth anniversary of the day of its making.

Section 56 of the Act allows a regulation to be made to exempt uniform subordinate legislation from expiry for a stated period of not more than five years after the uniform subordinate legislation would otherwise expire.

Section 56A(1) of the Act allows a regulation to be made to exempt subordinate legislation from expiry for one year on the following grounds:

- replacement subordinate legislation is being drafted and is proposed to be made before the stated period ends;
- the subordinate legislation is not proposed to be replaced or preserved when it expires at the end of the stated period; or
- the Act or provision under which or in relation to which the subordinate legislation or part of the subordinate legislation is made or preserved is subject to review.

Subordinate legislation may also be further extended for a period of not more than one year under section 56A(2) if the Act or provision under which or in relation to which the subordinate legislation or part of the subordinate legislation is made or preserved is subject to review.

The Statutory Instruments (Exemptions from Expiry) Amendment Regulation 2017 (the Regulation) ensures that subordinate legislation may be exempted from expiry or further exempted from expiry where appropriate grounds exist under sections 56 and 56A of the Act.

Achievement of policy objectives

The policy objective to encourage regular review of Queensland's subordinate legislation is achieved by requesting Government departments to assess the relevancy of expiring subordinate legislation, and consider the necessity of reviewing the relevant parent Act. As a result of this process, it is recommended to amend the Statutory Instruments Regulation 2012 to exempt:

- one item of subordinate legislation for a period of one year on the grounds that replacement subordinate legislation is being drafted and is proposed to be made before the stated period ends;
- six items of subordinate legislation for a period of one year on the grounds that the Act or provision under which or in relation to which the subordinate legislation or part of the subordinate legislation is made or preserved is subject to review;
- one item of uniform subordinate legislation for a period of five years; and
- 38 items of subordinate legislation for a further period of one year on the grounds that the Act or provision under which or in relation to which the subordinate legislation or part of the subordinate legislation is made or preserved is subject to review.

Consistency with policy objectives of authorising law

The Regulation is consistent with the main objects of the Act as it supports regular review of Queensland subordinate legislation and encourages Government departments to proactively remake, replace or allow to lapse expiring subordinate legislation.

Benefits and costs of implementation

The Regulation provides a benefit as it encourages Government departments to regularly review the relevancy of subordinate legislation and take action to remake, replace or allow to lapse expiring subordinate legislation in a timely manner.

There are no costs to Government in implementing the Regulation as it is administrative in nature.

Consistency with fundamental legislative principles

The Regulation is consistent with fundamental legislative principles as set out in the Legislative Standards Act 1992. The Regulation does not breach fundamental legislative principles as it is administrative in nature, ensuring the stock of subordinate legislation remains current and relevant.
